

CSL DESKTOP REFERENCE CARD

A Parent's Guide to Child Internet Safety

www.cybersciencelab.com

A Program of the National Institute of Justice

*This is to be used as an informational guide only.
Please refer to our disclaimer at www.cybersciencelab.com.*

A Parent's Guide to Child Internet Safety

- Be sure that your child never gives out identifying information such as their full name, home address, name of school, telephone number, password, age, or personal photo to anyone
- Learn the different safety measures made available by your Internet Service Provider; many ISPs offer methods to filter the content of your child's online browsing
- Make both your child and yourself aware of the anonymity of the internet; many of the "children" your child encounters may actually be adults
- Be aware of the people your child interacts with while using the internet; make it a point to know these people just as you would know your child's ordinary friends
- Never allow your child to arrange a meeting with someone they have come to know online
- Encourage your child to inform you of any obscene, confusing, violent, or threatening transmission they may encounter
- Report illegal transmissions such as child pornography or threats to your state and local law enforcement agency, and call the National Cybertip Line at 1-800-843-5678
- Set rules for your child's use of the internet. For example, set time limits for usage, periodically supervise them, and sign a parent/child contract
- For additional information on child internet safety and a copy of a parent/child internet safety contract, log on to:
www.missingkids.com/en_US/publications/NC03.pdf

