District 50 Seeks Presenters and Agencies for First Parent University

HARVARD, Ill. — Harvard District 50 is seeking workshop presenters and resource fair vendors for its first Parent University on April 4.

The one-day event aims to promote the active role parents and caregivers take in their child's education and to connect families with local community agencies.

Those interested in presenting are encouraged to submit proposals through the district's website. Proposals for workshops and the resource fair are due by Friday, February 21.

Parent University will consist of a variety of free workshops on topics related to academic support, career and college readiness, civil rights, extra-curricular activities and outreach, financial literacy, health and mental wellness, socio-emotional learning, and technology.

The event will feature concurrent workshops in English and Spanish, along with the resource fair.

Parent involvement is a leading indicator of a child's academic success. Parent University provides practical information for families to successfully nurture and guide their children through school.

The free event is on Saturday, April 4, from 9 a.m.-2 p.m. at Harvard High School, located at 1103 N. Jefferson Street, Harvard, IL 60033.
