Charlton County Student Wins National Conservation Themed Photo Contest

Nancy was also the winner of Georgia Association of Conservation District's state photo contest, and the winner of the Satilla River Conservation District's local photo contest.

The Georgia Association of Conservation Districts represents all 40 of Georgia's Conservation Districts including the Satilla River Conservation District that promotes conservation throughout Atkinson, Brantley, Camden, Charlton, Glynn, Pierce, Ware, and Wayne Counties. More information about GACD and the Satilla River Conservation District can be found at www.gacd.us.
