

Cam's Course

It seems appropriate that this story is appearing on September 11. For me this day will represent many things, but foremost will be the manner in which people instinctually draw together to care for others. It is a phenomenon which September 11 demonstrated on a large scale and on a smaller scale we observe here in Lyme regularly. If anyone has spent time in committees you can appreciate how difficult it can be to get people to work together, which makes this phenomenon of widespread spontaneous care so incredible and inspiring. Usually the conditions for such need is a source of pain and yet simultaneously it is also an occasion that can remind us of what we are capable of as individuals and as a group. When things are at their worst, we can rise above to be at our best.

This past weekend we were able to see another example of the instinctual care that takes place in communities like Lyme. As a result of the tireless care, effort and compassion of people like Nini Meyer, Dan Lynch, the Marshall family, and notably anonymous benefactors, 399 participants were able to gather in support of family, friends and an organization who cares for the health of our children. I am proud to be a part of such an effort and associated with the kind of people who invest themselves so deeply in it.

Thank you Nini, Dan and all those who came out in support or contributed to the effort last Saturday.

Thank you to all those families who remind us of how strong and poised we are capable of being in the face of difficulty.
