

Vended Snacks IDEAS

Snacks sold in vending machines, at school stores and concession stands, and on the lunch a la carte line should provide healthy choices for students, staff and parents. Keeping levels of sugar, total fat, and trans and saturated fat at low percentages as well as having limits on maximum package size ensure snacks are positive additions.

New products, reformulated products and new package sizes may become available. To see if they are good choices, check the list below for maximum package size for each snack type then go to www.californiaprojectlean.org/calculator to help you determine the nutrient percentages. Follow the website Nutritional Calculator instructions. Check for these 3 items: fat  $\leq$  35% of total calories, trans or saturated fat  $\leq$  10% of total calories, added or total sugar  $\leq$  35% total package weight. Nuts and seeds are exempt from the fat standard. The following list provides examples of packaged items that meet these levels. Remember that fresh fruit & veggies are great snacks.
