Did you have access to a working laptop or computer to complete assignments such as virtual instruction?	Yes	Yes	Yes	Yes	Yes	Yes	Yes	No	No	No	Yes		Yes	Yes	Yes	Yes	Yes	Yes	Zoom and Google Classroom	I feel fairly confident with blended learning. I have been doing a version of this for 2 years already. Ideas for how to incorporate my labs into a blended learning atmosphere would be great. I will need a laptop. I have been using my personal device & I cannot keep doing this. It takes up too much room in the memory. I also will struggle with bandwidth if it becomes the norm for us. We use internet on our phones and we do have a limit. If I am having to do videos and record lectures, it will use up my data very quickly.

																			I had issues with blended instruction at home. My internet was too slow. When I came out to school to do it, it was OK. I zoomed with Makenna Goss. The only technology I have at home is an iPad. When I did zooming at home it was too slow. I borrowed a laptop from school and a mobi. it was still too slow at times. At home I will need a desk top or lap top, and a mobi. A Chromebook doesn't work well enough for what I am doing. I will do a good job if I can zoom with my students. If they can't zoom then they can go to flipped math to see another presentation of the work. They will need to have internet. Math classes aren't like other classes. My students need to do work on paper and submit that. All they have to do is turn it into a tub outside with my name on it or
