Ever Since the World

Began

Approximately 18 years ago there was a major boom in the baby industry. Nationwide, babies were born with a distinctive characteristic about them. As those certain few grew into adolescents and then to young adults, this distinctive characteristic began to appear. At this point in time, it was known by all that the students of EHS were BORN TO BE ORANGE.

Through the years of happiness and tears, the friendships grew stronger. The following pages of the '89 Railroader capture only a small portion of the memorable experiences of the students of EHS. But until the day that we must part, the everlasting memories which were created by each and every student will forever live in our hearts.

A Different

Beat

The EHS band had another good year. From half-time shows in September to the Memorial Day appearances in May, it was a full season. Mr. Dietz commented on why it was a special year for him.

"This has been an unusual year for me because all of the students this year have been instructed by me since the fifth grade. They are all exceptionally good players."

The band received a I rating at the State Fair. They entertained the Ellis crowds at football and basketball games, wrestling matches, and at the Christmas and spring concerts.

Just the right Beat

Size was not a major concern for Mrs. Maggie McKain, vocal instructor at EHS.

"The equal balance of voices made up for the small number of students," said McKain.

The choir students began the school year with daily rehearsals for the MCL vocal clinic at Victoria. The annual clinic is one in which Ellis has always participated. Other performances included the Christmas and spring concerts. All choir students were also required to participate in an ensemble for contest, which took place in April.

Eberle, a freshman choir member, replied, "Choir went pretty good except the Christmas concert wasn't as successful as we had wished. We tried hard and that's what counts."

When asked what she would have changed about the choir program, McKain replied, "Many people comment on how important it is to have the same teachers year after year. It works the same way in a music program. When the students continue to take choir year after year, they improve both individually and as a group."

The Complete

Picture

Photography is always filled with surprises, and this year was no different. This year's wettest surprise occurred when a water pipe busted in the dark room over the weekend. On Sunday afternoon Mr. Eldon Pfeifer happened to be walking down the hall when he discovered water seeping out from under the photography door. He called Mrs. Linda Riedel and they discovered that the water was three inches deep, flowing into the adjacent rooms and running across the hall heading toward Mr. John Kolacny's room. Mr. Gilbert Augustine, custodian, and Mr. Clair Beecher, superintendent, were called to help clean up. It was still a little damp on Monday, but class resumed.

This year's class had a good size, but they realized early in the year that more people does not mean less work.

"This year we have the biggest photography staff ever, which means we have taken lots and lots of pictures but still never the right ones," said Mrs. Riedel, photography teacher.

The class, consisting of two seniors and five juniors, took pictures for the yearbook and other various organizations. They also took group portraits at Homecoming, Snoball and Prom. They supported themselves by selling the dance portraits and black and white photos to students, as well as receiving a yearly payment from journalism.

Idea

For the second time in three years, an EHS journalist placed first at state contest.

Jodi Gottschalk, sr., received first place in double page spread and design.

Gottschalk, Jill Kippes, sr., Sharnelle Shannon, jr., and Toni Dinkel, jr., competed at State at Kansas University in April.

The journalism staff, consisting of six seniors and three juniors, chose the theme, "Born to Be Orange," for the 1988-89 yearbook.

Due to adviser Mrs. Donna Henry's extended maternity leave, the staff concentrated on completing the yearbook and did not distribute a regular newspaper throughout the year.

Two of the returning seniors started the year in the summer by attending a three-day workshop in Hays.

Jill Kippes and Wendy Waldschmidt took fourth place in the workshop's design contest. The graphics ideas that they used were incorporated into this yearbook.

Freshmen

On the first day of school, there were many frightened faces in the halls of EHS. They belonged to the 45 freshmen. The freshmen had the biggest class at EHS, consisting of 14 girls and 31 boys.

As freshmen, the class of '92 experienced choosing the classes they wanted throughout the year.

During Homecoming the freshmen demonstrated enthusiasm and spirit as they placed second in spirit competition and third in the float competition.

"There was not much work done on the float, but fun was had by all. We participated with a lot of enthusiasm in the events throughout the week," said class president Zach Zerfas.

Sophomores

When asked to describe the sophomore class, Jarrett Kolacny, so., said, "We're the most competitive class in high school."

Sophomores Natalie Seibel and Stacy Dinkel agreed with Kolacny's assessment. Both mentioned 'closeness' and 'a competitive spirit' as the ingredients for a successful year.

The class's competitive spirit led them to place first for spirit and for their float entry during Homecoming week.

Besides competing for class honors, the sophomores worked the concession stand at all home games to make money for Prom and graduation.

Survey reveals dating game

D ating is something every high school student gets to experience at one time or another. The EHS sophomores were surveyed in order to find out how they viewed the dating game.

When asked the ideal age to begin dating, many ages were listed, but the majority of sophomores listed 14 years as the best age.

Places listed as the site of the first date were many. The Dairy Kreme and a basketball game were only two of the common places mentioned.

When the sophomores were asked if they could change anything about dating if they had the chance, there were many responses.

"I wouldn't have dated so young. I would have spent more time getting to know girls," said Brenda Beecher.

"I would take a girl to a fancy restaurant and then go dancing," said Jeff Kippes.

"I would not act so silly and act more like myself," said Karla Kinderknecht.

Although the survey was a simple one, it revealed that the sophomores hold diverse views about dating.

Juniors

W hen it comes to people having to pull together, the junior class of 1990 could be counted on throughout the year.

Although the small class of 28 people didn't quite rack up enough points during Spirit Week, they pulled together to take first place on their float.

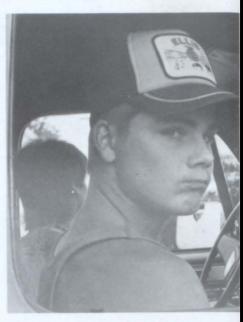

Trying to outdo the junior play of the year before required hard work from everyone. With the help of Mrs. Linda Riedel, speech and drama teacher, the juniors worked together to have 100% participation. Although not everyone had a speaking part, everyone played a big part in putting the show on.

Once again the juniors pulled together to show their unity for one of the biggest events of the year, the Jr-Sr Prom. The juniors were quick to come up with a theme and neat ideas.

"It was really great to see everyone working together and putting in ideas and helping out a lot," said Brad Honas, president.

Excitement hits Ellis during

"W e interrupt this program to bring to you a special news bulletin. The police are now searching for two adult negro males involved in a gas skip. The suspects have abandoned their car two miles south of Yocemento. They seem to be heading west and are suspected to be unarmed. If you see anything suspicious, please notify the police immediately. We return now to our regular program."

An unusual bit of excitement hit Ellis High School in January 1989. Although some students found it no big deal, others saw it as a chance to skip the books and make the news.

The event was made known to most students by their car radio. Ag students who were watering the trees were the first to become involved. They saw the two men crossing the school grounds. Eric Shannon, sr., said that he didn't think it was the fugitives at first because he thought that there was only one man being chased.

The two men were next seen walking past the art room. Mr. Stan Faulkender, art teacher, reported the sighting to the office and went outside to approach the men who seemed to be looking for a car. When asked how he felt as he approached the men, Faulkender said, "I felt like Clint Eastwood, 'Dirty Stanley'."

the big manhunt

The students counted how many highway patrol cars were outside, and at one time there were nine patrol cars in the parking lot. In addition to the land search, an airplane was seen swooping so low that at times it barely missed the water tower.

There was definitely a search taking place.

The smaller of the two men was arrested walking toward the grade school. Three hours later, the other man was spotted and apprehended on E. 14th Street.

Meanwhile, at 12:30 the students, some upset that the excitement was over, answered to the call of the fifth hour bell. The outcome of the day could have been summed up in many different ways. The men were caught, and the students of Ellis High were linked to two stories. The first story, told by the papers and media, brought a sense of publicity to EHS. The other story is one that the present students of Ellis High School could tell many years down the road of the irony of two negroes passing through Ellis on foot.

Leaders on the

MOVE

A tentative code of conduct was brought before Stu-Co to consider for adoption this year. If adopted, the code of conduct, a part of the Target program, would prohibit the use of alcohol, tobacco and other drugs. Those students breaking the code would be prohibited from participating in extra-curricular activities.

Stu-Co representatives had many questions concerning the enactment and enforcement of the conduct code. They found out that the code, if passed, would not be put into effect until the 1989-90 school year.

In addition, during the school year Stu-Co sponsored a car wash, hosted Homecoming and sponsored a Christmas movie for the student body.

Farming the Usual

The Future Farmers of America had another busy year. The annual events included a faculty breakfast, fruit sales, Barnwarmer and the end-of-theyear banquet.

When asked about fruit sales, Mr. Eldon Pfeifer, adviser, said, "Fruit sales had a successful year even though the number of boxes sold was less."

Top fruit sellers were: Terry Patee, sr., first; Jason Gager, soph., second; Jeff Kohl, fr., third; and Sheldon Pfeifer soph., fourth.

FFA Week was February 18-25. Activities consisted of Dress Up Day, a faculty breakfast, a round bale rolling contest and a chicken chase.

When asked how he felt about FFA as a whole, Brian Kruckenburg, soph., said, "I feel the FFA as an organization has a great deal to offer, but as in anything, you must put into it what you expect to get out of it."

Other events throughout the year included dairy and poultry juding, an Ag mechanics contest and a Greenhand conference.

POSSIBLE

Mission

FHA had another busy schedule this year. They had seven entries of oral presentation in the district contest on February 15, two of which qualified for state on March 30. The oral presentations allow students to participate in events which help to demonstrate their knowledge of various phases of home economics.

The two qualifying entries were Dallas Faulkender and a group entry including Amy Bartlett, Jennifer Keller, Misty Rathbun and Carman Werner. The state contest and the state meeting the following day (March 31) were held in Topeka.

Besides the qualifiers, the members who had accumulated the most points over the year were allowed to attend the state meeting.

Career Day was one of this year's biggest projects. People that were qualified to speak on specific careers came to EHS to speak and to try to answer the questions of the students. Every student was allowed to visit with three different speakers. Overall, there was a positive student reaction toward the Career Day.

As always, FHA did many things for others. On a hayrack ride in December, the girls went Christmas carolling and visited the Good Samaritan Home. They also held a raffle on the night of the last home basketball game with the proceeds going to the Arthritis Foundation.

On the whole, there seemed to be more energy within the club.

"I felt that the students have been enthusiastic about their projects this year," said sponsor Mrs. Virginia Duell.

Control

Although the population of students at EHS slightly rose, control for teachers, is still right down their alley.

Smaller classes have several advantages. The teachers can get to know the students and can focus on giving each student more personal attention. This gives the teacher a better idea of each student's capabilities.

According to Mrs. Marla Deines, psychology and foreign language teacher, "A smaller number of students in classes allows individualized teaching and an opportunity for me to get to know my students better."

Administration

Many students don't realize that the future of our school lies within the administration. The administration consists of the superintendent, principal, secretaries, and the school board who all keep our school running smoothly.

Keeping the school running and working is the role of the superintendent, Mr. Clair Beecher. Judy Tway, Mr. Beecher's right-hand woman, keeps the district office under control. This is Mr. Beecher's third year here at Ellis.

Keeping in touch with the students isn't quite as hard for the principal, Mr. Reggie Romine. His office is located in the school along with his secretary, Dorothy Waldschmidt.

Along with Mr. Romine and Mr. Beecher is the school board. They are just as important in keeping the school functioning. They all attend games, plays and assemblies to help support Ellis High as well as set district policies.

Seniors

Known as a group with style, the class of 1989 began the year in a unique way. Approaching the school year with something different in mind, the seniors borrowed a wheat truck from Brady and Blake Bittel. The seniors met before classes the first day and began to travel around Ellis, showing everyone how eager they were to finally be seniors.

Actively participating in many sports and organizations, the seniors demonstrated true leadership throughout the year. During homecoming week, they placed second in the float competition and third in the spirit week competition.

Knowing that money was in short supply, they held the annual chili soup supper and sold candy bars to raise funds. They also began preparations for a successful Project Graduation.

When asked how he felt about this year, Blake Bittel, class president, said, "I think this year went great, and if the other classes follow in our footsteps, this high school will remain at its best."

FINAL Step

The final step of the class of '89's high school career was taken on the evening of May 23.

Their last appearance as a class was in gowns of generic color, black and white. To complete the finishing touch, the class chose the red rose as the class flower.

After valedictorian, Eric Hays, and salutatorian, Davon Armbrister, gave their farewell speeches, Dr. Edward Hammond, president of Fort Hays State University, gave the seniors a bit of advice to guide them in their futures. The evening ended as Mr. Clair Beecher, superintendent, presented the class of 34 graduates with their diplomas.

Project Graduation was held after commencement to give the seniors one last evening together before they journeyed on their separate ways.

Shout

Out

Once again organized spirit at EHS slowly diminished. The year started out in full swing, but as time went on students no longer got involved.

"People want things done, but nobody wants to get involved," said President Holly Dinkel.

Despite the lack of pep, pep club held their annual good secret fan party and skating party. At one of the club meetings, the members voted to sell signs which say, "Railer Pride Rides Inside."

The suggestion of a Valentine's dance was brought up at which the students would be matched up with the person that they are most compatible with by a computer. An open date on the calendar will determine the outcome of the dance.

The photographers were sent out and the search for the best-looking male legs was on. Pictures were taken of a pair of legs from each class to be entered in the "Best Legs" contest. Included in the contest was Wade Ditter, fr., John Riedel, soph., Brad Honas, jr., and Brad Tebo, sr. Honas took the title of "Best Legs." The money contributed to the contest by students went to Project Hope.

Additional services done by Kayettes were Alumni invitations, Kleenex boxes for teachers and faculty, clowns at the football game, spirit posters for Pac the Place, Valentine's cards and candy for the Good Samaritan Center, money on tape class competition, auction, and a pageant donation.

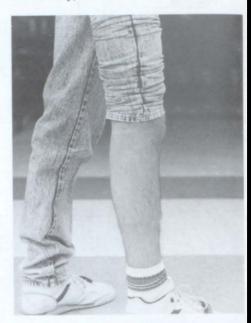

According to Nikki Phillips, sr., president, "I thought that our Valentine's project for the Good Samaritan Center was our best project because no one realizes how important the older generation is."

While Mrs. Donna Henry was on a four-month maternity leave, Mrs. Doris Collins took the position of sponsor.

Henry commented on the performance of the Kayette president, "I thought that Nikki did a very nice job of organizing all the projects during my leave. She had to really stay on top of things."

Standards

The volleyball court was the place to be as the volleyball team jammed to finish out a season of five wins and 18 losses.

Coach Cindy Hertel's goals for the year were for improvements in team attitude, record and squad number. The team went from a squad of 16 to 22 members, and a larger squad meant there were more players vying for positions, resulting in more

According to Hertel, since there were only two seniors, the underclassmen got the opportunity to see an ample amount of playing time. Hertel hopes that this will pay off in the future.

"I'm especially optimistic after sub-state. The team showed a lot of potential and character when they came back to beat Sharon Springs after being down in both games."

When Hertel was asked how she felt about the overall turnout, she replied, "Our record isn't indicative of the improvements shown. Our serving, movement and communication were all much better. Most importantly, the attitude was much more positive."

Top of the Line

Although the Railroader football team faced many obstacles throughout the season, the heart of the team carried them through.

"Though we had a decent season, I think the number of injuries caused us not to have a winning record. However, character led us to win our final ballgame because the kids never gave up," said Kirk Maska, head coach.

When asked what was his season highlight, Kyle Eberle, sr., said, "Winning Trego big time!" It was the Eagles' Homecoming, and the Railroaders soundly beat their long-time rivals, 12-0. Not only did the Railroaders successfully take the Trego game, but the team also beat the Hill City Ringnecks, their first Homecoming win in eight years.

Throughout the season, injuries plagued the Ellis team. "Breaking my ankle was one of the most memorable things of the year," said Eric Hays, sr. Hays was not the only player to get hurt during the season; illnesses and injuries also kept seniors Brady Bittel, Bob Shirk and Shawn Graf out of some games.

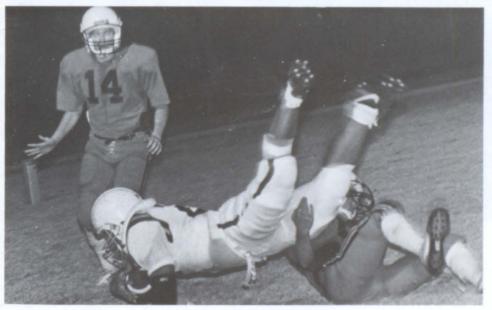

Despite their injuries, the Railroaders went on to end the season with a 3-6 record.

On your mark, get set, go. The Ellis cross-country team got off to a good start this year. Jenny Hillman, jr., finished third at the state meet while the girls' team, as a whole, finished seventh. Also, several runners did well at area meets.

The boys had a young team made up of one senior, one sophomore and five freshmen. Although the team was relatively they gained control forward to competing next year.

> When asked how they thought the year went, Brenda Shirk, jr., said, "I thought we improved every meet, and we had a lot of fun."

> John Riedel, so., said, "I think we were young, and in a few years we will do pretty good."

All the Right MOVES

Three months of weightwatching and tough practices finally paid off for three Ellis wrestlers as the team was represented at state competition by Kevin Augustine, Jeff Williams, and Jason Gager. Augustine placed 2nd, Williams placed 5th, and Gager placed 8th.

The wrestlers lived up to the expectations of Coach Stan Faulkender.

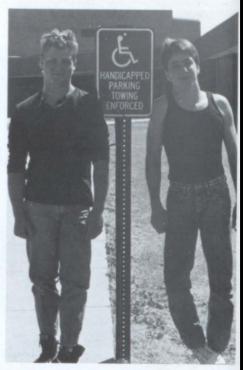

'The kids did exactly what I thought they would. They did what I knew they were capable of doing. As a matter of fact, we were even better than that," said Faulkender.

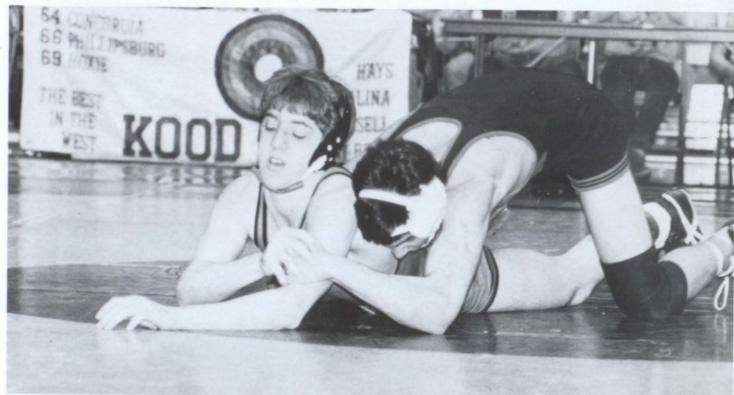

Although the wrestling team only had two home matches, their attitudes remained positive throughout the year.

"Even though we only had two home matches, our season remained positive because of the support we received on our away matches," said Jason Gager, so.

When asked what his thoughts were after the first day of high school wrestling practice, Lee Smith, fr., said, "The first thing I thought was 'We're not in the little leagues anymore."

On the Ball

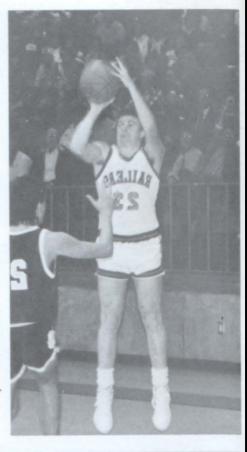

In high school sports the greatest achievement is making it to the state tournament. This year the Railroaders made it to the sub-state championship game, but came up short with a loss to the Hill City Ringnecks.

"It was great since we made it this far without any great athletes. It was just that we played more as a team this year," said Aaron Ditter, sr.

The team fell a little short with their goals. One of the main goals was to place high in the MCL Tournament, but with a loss in the first round to Osborne, they had to concentrate on the rest of the season.

With only six upperclassmen, the outcome of many close games came down to the remainder of the varsity team, which consisted of one freshman and several sophomores.

Hoop It Up

The 1988-89 basketball season for the girls proved to be an interesting one. Not only were they introduced to two new coaches, Mr. Bruce Erickson and Miss Lisa Walker, but they were also a very young and inexperienced team.

The varsity girls finished their season with a 5-13 record. However, one of those wins got them into the second round of MCL.

The team's only senior, Davon Armbrister, was chosen to the Mid-Continent League 1st team.

"We were pretty young — only having one player with varsity experience — and we were a little shaky. Hopefully, we'll do the rest of our rebuilding in the off-season and be ready to play next year," said Brenda Shirk, jr.

A major goal of the team is to work in the off-season and improve their record 100%.

"We are going to lose some height, but we will have experience next year," said Nicole Hewett, jr.

Coach Bruce Erickson is very optimistic about next year's season.

"This year was a valuable season for the team. It gave them a lot of varsity experience, and if they work hard for next year, it all should pay off, and we should go far," he said.

SWINGIN'

This year's golf season went fairly well considering the young age of the team.

"The kids played real well for as young as they were," said Coach John Kolacny.

Since this year served as a rebuilding season for some, next season should come as a rewarding one. This is particularly true because they will lose only two seniors.

As the season went by, individual scores improved with each meet. This success happens to those who work in the off-season.

"It takes a lot of extra work during the summer to become a good golfer. You can't expect to just play during the season and be good," said Brad Honas, jr.

Could it be deja vu? This girls' track team once again placed second at state. The two lady athletes who made this possible for the second time in two years were Jenny Hillman, jr., who placed first in the 3200 meter run and Brenda Beecher, soph., who placed first in both the 100 meter and 200 meter dashes. Beecher also placed third in the 400 meter dash.

The girls' track season was just as unique as it was successful. One of the reasons it was unique was because the team members helped make the rules and goals to be upheld throughout the season. Another reason the season was unique was because the season marked Mr. Kirk Maska's last year as coach.

When asked how the season went, Maska said, "The season went about as expected. Most of the girls improved on their performance throughout the year, which was one of our goals. This season was special because it was my last season as girls' track coach. I enjoyed working with all of the unique personalities on an individual basis. I will remember all of the lives I touched and how they all touched me."

On the Right

TRACK

With the low numbers out for track this year, John Phelan felt pleased with the outcome of the season.

With only five seniors and two juniors, the team worked very hard all year to be competitive.

Mr. Phelan, head boys' coach, said, "Everybody worked hard all year and did their best at all times."

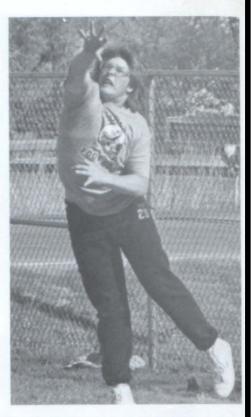

The hard work paid off for some when the 3200m relay qualified for state. The relay team consisted of Kevin Augustine, sr., Heath North, jr., Jeff Williams, soph., and Brian Kruckenberg, soph. The 3200m relay placed third at state.

Along with the 3200m relay, North qualified for state in the 800m run. North placed 10th at the state meet in Wichita.

Something to

Cheer

For most students, activities end with the last day of classes, but not for cheerleaders. As soon as the summer starts, the cheerleaders start working on a routine and a cheer for camp by practicing two to three times a week. They are also involved in money raisers throughout the summer to cut down on the price of camp. All of the cheerleaders are required to work at concession stands, bake sales, and the golf course.

All of the hard work paid off when they received fourth place in their division at DCA camp.

The cheerleaders put on several pep assemblies throughout the year, but as spirit dwindled they decided to cut down on pep assemblies.

Connie Kohl, head cheerleader said, "We spend at least 45 minutes preparing for a pep assembly, and it was real disappointing when no one would participate. So we decided against having any more pep assemblies."

Talk of the Town

A "totally awesome foot stompin' forensic talkin' "motto led the forensics team to placing sixth at Grand State Championships.

Eleven students traveled on May 6 to Bethel College for championships. Six of the eleven events broke semi-finals. Four of the six events broke finals and medaled. In humorous solo, Kelly Geschwentner placed second, and Sean O'Rourke placed fourth. Blake Bittel and Shannon McCoy placed fourth in Improvised Duet Acting, and Sharnelle Shannon placed fifth in prose.

Also on May 6, nine students traveled to Ransom for state festival. Nikki Phillips and John Locker received one's in their events.

"The eleven qualifiers for state excelled in their events. The outcome of our team placing showed the strength of the team. Their success meant not only capturing coveted state medals, but everyone competing at Bethel had one of the most enjoyable, yet tough, high-level competitions of the year," said Mrs. Linda Riedel, forensics coach.

"This was the best year we've had since I've been here. The season, because of fewer tournaments due to the bad weather, does not really reflect a true picture of our team's overall potential. Many more things could have been accomplished."

Class

The three act play, "Headin' for the Hills" was presented by the junior class this year. Mrs. Linda Riedel was the director, and Amy Fitzwater served as the assistant director.

"Because of the juniors' dedication and organization, rehearsals went well enough to cancel some early ones. The juniors were prepared in every direction to stage a successful performance," said Riedel.

The successful performance was mainly due to the 100% participation from the junior class.

"If it wasn't for the whole class putting in their hard work, the play would not have been half the success it was," said Angie Werner, jr.

IDENTIFYING

Our Town

With the overabundance of comparts, not just say their lines. edies in the past, the senior class chose a more dramatic and classic play in Thorton Wilder's Our Town.

Since the play has basically no set, pantomime is a major factor in the impact and success of the play. Although the pantomime seemed awkward to some at first, with practice it was soon mastered.

"We could have presented one of those ordinary, humorous plays, but we were complimented so much more on the quality and difficulty of Our Town," said Jill Kippes (Emily Webb).

Elton Armbrister (Dr. Gibbs) said, "I thought that the play was not standing on steady ground at the beginning of rehearsals; however, the young ladies and gentlemen came around and made the play successful."

Director Mrs. Cindy Hertel helped the students act their Wendy Waldschmidt was the student director who was responsible for sound effects such as trains and chickens.

Members of the Ellis High Choir were asked to play the part of a church choir, and Mrs. Maggie McKain helped with that. Mrs. Linda Riedel assisted with acting advice and suggestions to Aaron Ditter and Terry Patee on the lights, while Mr. Bill Dietz helped set up the lights.

The cast and crew had a total of four weeks to prepare for the play, and every bit of practice time they could find was used.

The play made $450, giving the class $350 after expenses.

The play was well received, especially by the adult audience who could see themselves in the characters.

Big Eight Wait

Excitement filled the air while the Railer fans hurled onto the field to congratulate the victorious football team. The Railer team broke their eight year Homecoming losing streak, to proudly record their 1988 Homecoming victory against the Hill City Ringnecks, 16-14.

A week filled with excitement and enthusiasm came to a memorable end for the students at EHS.

During Homecoming week daily competitions between the classes were set up in two parts, dressing up and playing volleyball. The sophomores captured the spirit throughout the week.

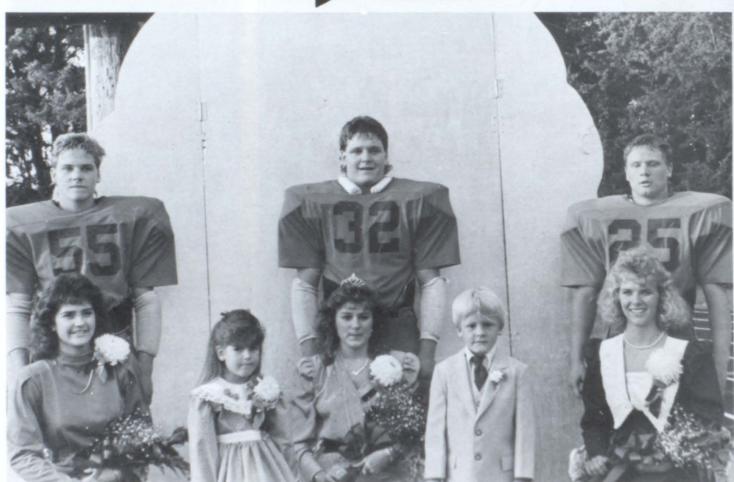

On Friday, the parade featured each class float designed around the theme, "This Bird's For You." The junior class won first prize with their float

Friday night set the scene for the crowning of the royalty. The anticipation grew as Jodi Gottschalk and Brady Bittel were crowned queen and king. Attendants included Wendy Waldschmidt, Blake Bittel, Connie Kohl and Kyle Eberle. The flower girl and crown bearer were Emily Fischer and Seth Dinkel.

Once again the Homecoming dance was a success as a DJ provided music.

Remember

"Winter Romance" was the theme for the 1988 Snoball. Snoball is the Kayettes' biggest event of the year. Each Kayette member had to earn six points by doing various world, national and community projects in order to attend the dance.

The dance was held in the high school lobby. It was filled with the colors of red, black and white. Helium balloons and metallic streamers transformed the high school lobby into an elite club.

"I think Snoball '88 was by far the best I have attended. The whole organization worked together to make it as enjoyable as it was. Mrs. Collins deserves an extra special thanks. She took on the responsibility and made it a great success," said Nikki Phillips, Kayette president.

Tom Begler and Jill Kippes, srs., were crowned king and queen. The princesses were Cassie Schmidt, jr., Carman Werner, soph., and Nicole Martin, fr. The princes were Heath North, jr., Jason Edmonds, soph., and Wade Ditter, fr.

During intermission, a routine to "I Want You to Rock Me" by Vixen was performed by Snoball servers Michelle Flax, Lesley Bartlett, Stana Bittel and Jenny Baugher.

Music for the dance was provided by Submytion, a band from Hays.

This year's annual Barnwarmer, sponsored by FFA and FHA, was on March 10, 1989.

The FFA sweetheart candidates were Christy Collins, Tina Stegman, Shannon McCoy and Cassie Schmidt. The FHA candidates were Heath North, Sammy Herman and Clint McElroy.

The girls were judged on how fast they could chop wood, drive nails into a piece of wood, and tie a ribbon on a calf's tail.

At the same time, the boys were in the kitchen performing homemaking skills. These skills included making pancakes, ironing, and folding sheets.

After the candidates were finished with their activities, they gave a short speech to complete the competition.

The dance was in the high school lobby with music provided by Sweet Innocence.

Romance in the

Orient

As the night dwindled away, another prom was soon over. For the seniors it meant their last prom, but it left the juniors anxiously waiting for their senior prom.

The theme for the 1989 Prom was "Romance in the Orient." To help portray the theme, the gym was decorated in red, black and gold. The music was presented by The Heat.

To complement the theme, almond chicken and sweet and sour pork were the entrees.

The sophomore servers were

Stacey Dinkel, Natalie Seibel, Carman Werner, Krista Weber, Karla Kinderknecht, Jennifer Keller, Jason Gager, Jason Edmonds, Jeff Kippes, John Riedel, Jeff Williams and Sheldon Pfeifer. The servers did a routine to the song, "The Look," by Roxette.

Mr. Stan Faulkender, jr. class sponsor, said, "Everyone was cooperative, and the attitude of the prom was the best I've seen in years."

Last Glimpse

As the last bell rang, the students of Ellis High School raced to the doorway, anticipating the relaxing summer days ahead of them. Although swept up in the excitement of summer, many students couldn't help remembering their joys and sorrows as they completed the year. Because of pride in many of their school activities, everyone knew these Ellis students were "Born To Be Orange!"

The first glimpse of orange was seen during homecoming week. Work began on floats and activities at the start of the week and ended with a bang as the Railroader football team claimed their first homecoming win in twelve years.

The next burst of excitement exploded when three Ellis wrestlers qualified for state competition. Because of Hays' proximity, Gross Memorial Coliseum was packed with roaring Ellis fans dressed in orange and black. The excitement grew during final competition, culminating when Kevin Augustine placed second in the 130 lb. weight class.

The next week, the excitement continued as, against all odds, the boys' basketball team made it to the finals at sub-state. Hoping for a tournament championship, many Ellis fans traveled to Hill City, dressed in orange and black attire, to support the Railer team. After fighting a tough battle, the team was still pleased to walk away with a second place trophy.

As the year continued, students of Ellis High School were constantly reminded of that orange pride through such activities as track, golf and forensics.

When asked why they were unique, an EHS student's response could simply be that "We were Born To Be Orange'!"
