Fifth Grade Writing Rubric

	1	2	3	4
Ideas/Content	Student sometimes loses focus from their topic. No details included.	Focused on topic and task but with minimal details that support the topic. Details may not add to the content.	Student stays focused on topic and task while including multiple supporting details that are relevant to the topic.	Consistently focused on topic and task. All details enhance the content of the topic.
Organization	Writing is not broken into paragraphs. Missing one or more of the following: Introduction, body, or conclusion. Transitions not present.	Writing is broken into paragraphs and includes Introduction, body or conclusion that may be disorganized. At times transitions are used, but writing may become choppy.	Piece is written with an introduction, body and conclusion that flow through ideas in an organized manner and fit the purpose of the piece. Transitions are present throughout and used correctly.	Writing flows between paragraphs with smooth transitions and catchy hooks. Organization stands out and is chosen for a purpose.
Voice	Writing does not attempt to engage the reader and lacks a point of view. Purpose of writing is unclear.	Student may switch between points of view, and the voice does not match the purpose at all times. The writing does not consistently engage the reader.	Writing voice and style match the purpose (narrative, informative, or persuasive) and student chooses one point of view and stays with it throughout the piece. Voice is engaging to the reader.	Engages the reader throughout with interesting and appropriate voice. The piece is engaging and is written with clear purpose.
Word Choice	Students use no creative words or most of the text uses repetitive word choice.	Student begins to vary use of verbs and prepositions and words are varied through most of the essay.	Student uses a variety of verbs and prepositions throughout their text and uses multiple fifth grade vocabulary words.	Meaning and emotion are enhanced through student's specific word choice of verbs, prepositions, adjectives, adverbs, and figurative language.
Sentence Fluency	Oral reading is difficult due to missing words or sentence parts. Most sentences are simple with the same beginning phrases.	Most sentences have correct structure. Many sentences are simple and no more than two sentences in a row start with the same beginning.	Writing can be read aloud smoothly and has begun to show expression. Some compound and complex sentences are added.	Student includes simple, compound and complex sentences throughout to create expression and demonstrate understanding of sentence fluency in their writing.
