BASKETBALL SEASON OPENS

First Game was a Victory, but Since Then Team Has Lost Steadily

The basketball team motored to Bison on January 22, for the first game of the season. The quintet showed up in good form and scored a victory. Ever since then a jinx has been camping on the trail of the team, causing them to lose four games in succession.

H. C. A. 31, Bison 17

The first and only victory was won from Bison on their own court in a fast game. The final score was, Hays 31, Bison 17. The game opened with Pike scoring a basket from the tip-off. Hays scored several more baskets before Bison succeeded in scoring. Thereafter Leo Staab, Pike and Red Jacobs scored at regular intervals. The teamwork was nearly perfect. Whenever Bison became dangerous, one of our men would shot a ringer. A number of subs also got a chance to show their skill. "Sandy" felt mighty proud of the team and looked forward to a successful season. But the fates decreed otherwise.

H. C. A. 15, Ellis 16

Ellis H. S. was their tool. On January 29 the squad went to Ellis and was defeated. The game opened with Hays scoring several baskets in quick succession. Hays kept the lead until near the end. The first half ended in a 12 to 3 score. Several lucky shots plus a number of free throws by Ellis gradually closed the gap until they had the score tied in the last quarter. A free throw gave Ellis the lead and the game.

H. C. A. 19, LaCrosse 26

The home season opened with LaCrosse as guests. And wishing to be polite Hays allowed the guests to win the game, but only after putting up a good fight. Pike shot a ringer from the opening tip-off. Thereafter both sides scored throughout the game. Hays showed better team-work than LaCrosse, but had hard luck in scoring. The game was very close, there never being more than a two-point difference, until the last few minutes of play when LaCrosse shot several baskets in quick succession. Cavin and Russell scored most of the points for LaCrosse.

H. C. A. 18, Menlo 26

On February 5, the team from Menlo was the guest of the H. C. A. and as guest was allowed to win. Menlo took the lead right from the start and kept it throughout the game. It was a poor game from the Hays point of view. And so was the second game with LaCrosse.

H. C. A. 15, LaCrosse 30

When the H. C. A. paid LaCrosse a return visit on February 12, LaCrosse did not play the role of kind hostess, but rather that of pirate, by taking this game also. Hays scored first and held the lead at the end of the first quarter, but the half ended 17 to 10 in favor of LaCrosse. The final score showed LaCrosse the winner by a fifteen point margin.

LIFE and DEATH

Out of the mist,
As though just kissed
To light, the sun appears,
In dewy morn
A day is born;
Thus life begins with tears.

Then to decline,
All things resign
And light begins to fade.
With setting sun
The day is done
And darkness follows shade.

And so with man,
Brief is the span
Of life, as a day in spring.
When all is o'er
Death seals the door
And friends a requiem sing.

But at the doom
Out of the tomb
Will resurrection be.
Effaced from sin
The soul shall win
A blessed eternity.
—Br. Florian.

REV. ALUMNUS SINGS MASS

Rev. August Koerperich, '16, Officiates in College Chapel

On February 9, Father Koerperich, '16, the first of the alumni to enter the priesthood celebrated high mass in the College Chapel. Only the Angels know what sentiments and prayers were his during this time.

Father Koerperich graduated from the classical department in 1916. Thereupon he went to Kenrick Seminary to study philosophy and theology. He was raised to priesthood on August 14, 1921, in the Cathedral at Concordia by the Rt. Rev. Francis J. Tief, D. D. After spending several weeks as chaplain to the Sisters at Nazareth Academy, Father Koerperich was put in charge of four mission churches with headquarters at Minneapolis, Kansas. He stayed there only a short time when he was made pastor of the Sacred Heart Church at Greenleaf, Kansas, where he is at present. He has also been a member of the Board of Examiners of the Diocesan schools.

Although Father Koerperich is located at quite a distance from his Alma Mater and kept very busy he nevertheless finds time to visit his Alma Mater at frequent intervals. This time, however, we had something more than the usual reception. And it was our little chapel that afforded the accommodation. Father Koerperich was pleased, yes, surprised to see such an improvement. Undoubtedly he was thinking to himself, why couldn't we have had such a chapel in our time? Yes, what good such a chapel could and would have done for the students in those times will and is already shown by the new spirit among the students since we have the chapel. We hope and pray that with our chapel and good spirit among the students we may produce more graduates who will follow in the footsteps of Father Koerperich.

FRESHMAN

The Freshman class is dead, buried, iam foetet. Perhaps with the coming of sprng, the class will resurrect.

H. C. A. BEATS QUINTER

After Winning Seventeen Games They Lose to Hays

By a score of 19 to 18 the H. C. A. basketball team defeated the Quinter team Friday, February 19. It was the first defeat for Quinter this season. The game was played in the Sheridan Colliseum as a preliminary to the K. S. T. C. of Hays game, against the Salina Wesleyans.

Quinter took the lead in the first few minutes of play, scoring one point from the foul line, but held this lead only a short time, for Pike for H. C. A. shot two free throws and the first quarter was over. Hays gained steadily and the half ended 12 to 7 in Hays' favor.

Victory was due to Hays' superior team work. Short passes upset Quinter. Quinter showed flashes of fast team work in the beginning of the second half.

Leo Staab was high point man with nine points and Pike second with five. Bahly shot one long one. Staab won the game in the last twenty second of play.

The line-up was:

EDUCATIONAL MOVIE SHOWN

On the evening of February 10, the faculty and students were favored with an educational entertainment in the form of a film describing the making of the McCormick-Deering tractor of the International Harvester Co.

The film was very interesting and instructive. Mr. Gamble, the firm's representative, lectured throughout the showing of the six reels. The students enjoyed it very much and are grateful to Mr. Gamble for his interesting talk. They also wish to thank Messrs. Schlyer and Arnhold who were instrumental in having the picture shown.

H. C. C. NEWMAN CLUB PLAY

Drama, "Under the Flag" Well Presented to Capacity House

On Monday, February 9, the Newman Club presented for the public the drama, "Under the Flag", to large and appreciative audiences.

The plot of the drama held the audience spell-bound during the whole performance. The acting was exceptionally realistic. Francis Bollig had his voice so well under control that many thought he was actually weeping during the prison scene.

Francis Murphy, the Irishman, and Joe Schenk, the colored janitor, kept the audience in good humor by their humorous repartee. Theodore Urban in the role of Padre acted very naturally. Bernard and Hyacinth Roth could not have acted a difficult part more naturally. They enunciated very distinctly. Thomas Holzmeister and Julius Bahl also did well. In fact the whole cast was well chosen and each and every one, from Francis Stramel, the messenger boy, to Walter Ross, the governor, deserve honorable mention as showing great histrionic ability.

The orchestra rendered good selections between acts.

LENT

This holy season of Lent, although not strictly an apostolical institution, is of extreme antiquity. The reason for such a great Church fast of six weeks as a preparation for Easter is very evident.

What kind of a preparation or let us rather say reparation could Lent afford to students? This holy season of Lent allows to the students another opportunity to redeem themselves for their past negligencies in studies and other important undertakings. Fasting, although a very noble sacrifice, is not the only one, and since students are more or less dispensed from such an obligation they should therefore resort to some other mortification. Students have hundreds of chances to make a little sacrifice during this holy season. Here is just one little instance which struck my mind and which may, so to say, serve as an initiative for Lenten resolutions. Now, since winter has finally set in story books are again our pleasing companions. Much of our spare time is used for reading; a very good thing we all admit since well selected reading can be a source of inspiration and a powerful influence for good. But to come to the point, let us here draw a comparison between fasting and the selection of reading material. During Lent it is customary to abstain from certain favorite foods as an act of mortification. Now there are many students who have a very strong liking for fiction reading or magazine short stories. Why not make a little sacrifice by changing over to the more beneficial reading of instructive essays and history or for that matter at least historical novels?

Undoubtedly very few have ever thought of such a sacrifice, if such we may call it. But try this little plan once, besides your "quit smoking" plan and see what intellectual benefit besides the great spiritual good you derive. Remember such a sacrifice is for your own good.

THE TONGUE

The tongue is an object of great interest. As social beings we are interested in what assists us in keeping civilization alive. Aesop's Fables contain many stories, which, while untrue, contain a vast amount of common sense. One of these fables illustrates my subject to perfection.

Years ago when Aesop was a slave, his master bade him prepare a special dinner on two successive days. For the first meal he was to prepare the best meat he could procure, and for the second, the worst he could find. For both occasions Aesop chose tongue. When his master saw this, he demanded an explanation. Aesop calmly replied: "The tongue is the best thing in the world when used wisely, but the worst, when used indiscreetly."

The tongue is a small piece of muscle inside the mouth. It is very flexible. By means of the tongue we are enabled to judge correctly what appeals to the tastes. When sick, the doctor examines the tongue of a person; if it is coated, he immediately knows that the stomach is not in order, for the tongue is one of the first organs to be affected. The tongue, therefore, is an important factor in regard to the health of the body.

Men tried to oppose the will of God by attempting to build a tower reaching from the earth to the heavens. God thwarted their plans by simply changing their language, so that they could not understand one another. As social beings we have here a striking example of the tongue's importance. Civilization depends upon man's ability to convey his ideas to others.

The good that the tongue does is unlimited. It is necessary for the public worship of God. Through the medium of the tongue we ask aid necessary in assisting us to keep God's commandments. The tongue is an instrument through which knowledge is imparted to others.

Several years ago the Johnstown dam burst. A man, riding ahead the raging waters, warned the people living in the valley and thus saved many lives. It was Paul Revere's tongue that roused the American colonists and saved them from the dangers that threatened them. The trade and commerce of the world depend largely on the tongue for their existence and expansion. The tongue advises and admonishes to good and noble deeds and not infrequently brings about a reformation in the lives of men.

Having read of the good that the tongue does we must turn to another phase, namely, the evil committed by the tongue.

Blasphemy, swearing and cursing come from the abuse of the tongue. It is the channel through which bad stories are circulated and whereby good morals are corrupted.

While many objects may be compared with the tongue, the following example will suffice. Fire is very useful and yet may cause much harm. As long as it is kept under control it benefits man, but once beyond bounds, destruction and ruin follow. So the tongue; if used correctly, it will be the source of much good, but if unchecked, it will cause scandals, enmities, lawsuits, etc.

Therefore control your tongue, for nothing is more contemptible than a talkative man. The proverb, "Think twice before you speak," contains sound advice. Many a hasty word has caused the fires of jealousy and hatred to flare up, which have led to quarrels, lawsuits and even murder, for a word once spoken can never be recalled. —Forrest Barker, '28

MANY VISIT COLLEGE CHAPEL

Former Directors of the College Among the Visitors

Since the formal opening of the little College Chapel, recorded in the last issue of the JOURNAL, many alumni and other friends of the College have visited the Chapel and have expressed their delight at the cozy place of worship now afforded the students.

It so happened that on the same day the Rev. Father Cyrill, O. M. Cap., now pastor of the Sacred Heart Church at Ness City, and Rev. Father Gilbert, O. M. Cap., now pastor of St. Mary's Church at Ellis, visited the College and the Chapel. They were very much pleased with the Chapel and congratulated the Rev. Director on accomplishing what they both knew to be a necessity.

Father Cyrill and Father Gilbert both were in former years Director of the College. With the practical eye of pastors they noted the absence of many necessary things and on departing gave a donation towards the Chapel. Father Cyrill also donated a set of small Stations of the Cross. These will be erected for the Lenten season.

The students wish to express their appreciation of the kind gifts and ask the Rev. Fathers to kindly remember the Chapel and its needs.

IT PAYS TO GRADUATE

If you scan the "want columns" of the daily papers under "Young Men Wanted," you will notice that the advertisements offering the best positions contain the phrases: "must be high school or college graduate," or "high school or college graduate preferred." Business men have found by experience that it pays them to pay more and hire educated men who will closely apply themselves to their tasks and do their work neatly, promptly and accurately. It is from the ranks of these "preferred" men that the future superintendents, managers, and presidents are recruited.

We had an increase in our class. Isidore Sauer has joined our ranks. The Sophomore Class now numbers twenty-three.

Four members of our class are going out for basketball in the Church League.

The semi-final examinations were quite stiff, but they are over and so is all the worry.

All the boys are going to try and make an average of ninety this semester so that they will not have to take the finals.

This class is dead. Perhaps with the return of spring new life will come.—F. B.

Kansas Day didn't seem to create much of a stir in school this year. Several students of both the high and grade school were heard asking on the street, "Why are the flags out today?" We apparently take more interest in Mr. Ground Hog than in our state's birth.—The Dickinsonian, Chapman, Kansas.

"O. K."

Do you know the history of the origin of O. K.? It is said that General Jackson used these letters to indorse official papers as correct (orl korrekt). This was a hit at Jackson's supposed illiteracy. Another authority says that Jackson used to indorse legal documents O.R. (order recorded) and that the R was mistaken for a K. This was a hit at Jackson's penmanship. Another explanation is that in Colonial days the best tobacco and rum were imported from Aux Cayes (o'ka) and thus became a popular expression for excellence.

Our class has no knockers. As our professor remarked, the place for knockers is outside the door.

THE WHISTLE

Do you remember Lincoln's story about the little steamer with the big whistle? Every time they tooted that whistle it blew off so much steam that the boat stopped running.

That's the trouble with lots of people today. If they would only use their energy to drive the paddle wheel of opportunity instead of eternally blowing the whistle of discontent they would find themselves going up the stream of success so very fast that the barnacles of failure wouldn't have a chance in the world to hook onto their craft. GEORGE WASHINGTON

George Washington, the first President of the United States, was born in Westmoreland county, Virginia, Feb. 22, 1732. At the age of 16 he was made surveyor of the large Fairfax property in Virginia, through his brother Lawrence, who had married into the Fairfax family. In this work he camped out in the forrests for months and was in constant danger from Indians. When the French and Indian war broke out he was sent by Governor Dinwiddie, of Virginia, to warn off the French, and his vigorous defense of Fort Necessity gained him, when only 23, the place of commander-in-chief of all the Virginia forces. He served in Braddock's campaign, and at Fort Duquesne, although he had two horses shot under him and four bullets passed through his coat, he was one of the few officers not wounded, and the Indians believed him to lead a charmed life.

With the close of the campaign, he married Mrs. Martha Custis, a wealthy widow, and settled down at Mt. Vernon, which his brother Lawrence had left him. Here he lived for twenty years the life of a southern planter, cultivating his estate and owning a very large number of slaves who were set free at the death of his wife, by his will.

He was several times a member of the Virginia legislature, where Patrick Henry called him "for solid information and sound judgment, the greatest man in the assembly," and in 1774 was sent to the Continental congress. After the battles of Lexington and Concord, congress, on motion of John Adams, unanimously selected George Washington as commander-in-chief of the army. Refusing any salary, he accepted the position, asking every gentleman in the room to remember his declaration that he did not consider himself equal to the command; a humility that went with him in all the high places to which he was called. He hastened to the camp at Cambridge, Massachusetts, where he assumed the command July 2, 1775. His courage, prudence, firmness and perseverance through defeats, jealousies, disaffection and lack of men and supplies, never failed, and brought the war to a successful issue in 1783. His influence secured the quiet disbanding of the discontented army, and he himself retired to his home on the Potomac. When the convention met in Philadelphia in 1788 to frame the Constitution he was its presiding officer and approved the Constitution, and when the time came under its provisions to elect the first President, there was only one choice in the country and Washington was made the first President of the United States by the unanimous vote of the electors in 1788, and re-elected unanimously in 1792; but declined an election in 1796.

His prudence and firmness and good judgment were as much needed in the forming days of the young republic as they had been in its struggles for liberty, and gradually with the help of his wisely selected cabinet the many difficult problems of the new government were settled.

He made his farewell address Sept. 17, 1796, and retired to Mount Vernon. Within a short time, however, difficulties with France threatening war, Washington was again called to the command of the armies of the United States. In the midst of these military preparations, he died after a short illness, Dec. 14, 1799. In the resolutions adopted in congress at his death, moved by John Marshall, occurs the well-known expression, "First in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his countrymen." He was six feet, two inches high, with a large frame, brown hair and blue eyes; very dignified and self-controlled. He had no children, but adopted two grand-children of his wife.

Washington has been universally deemed the greatest of Americans, and one of the noblest public characters of all time.

A good biography of Washington has been written by Washington Irving.

The color scheme in the College is characteristic of the people—red-blooded and "white."

THE TRIUMPH OF FLAIURE

A young man ran for the legislature of Illinois, and was swamped. He next entered business, failed, and spent seventeen years of his life paying up the debts of a worthless partner.

He was in love with a beautiful young woman to whom he became engaged—then she died.

Entering politics again, he ran for congress and was badly defeated. Then he became a candidate for the vice presidency, and was once more defeated.

One failure after another—bad failures—great setbacks. Then he became one of the greatest men in America—in the history of mankind. His name was Abraham Lincoln.

You may talk of signs of weather,
Of coming days you may sing;
But when you sit down on a good sharp tack,
It's a sign of an early spring.

LINCOLN'S HONESTY

Is there one of us who has read the life of Abraham Lincoln without having been inspired? Not a single person who reads subsequent stories can claim a more lowly beginning than "Honest Abe." Clerking in grocery stores was quite the thing in Lincoln's time. Many successful men of his generation got their start that way.

Histories do not tell us, though, of men who used their spare time as Lincoln did. "I will study," he said "and when the time comes, I will be ready." Lincoln made the most of his spare time as a grocery clerk in the store of Denton Offuts in the village of New Salem, Ill. This was the first position that he held after leaving his father's roof in August, 1831, at the age of 22, to make his fortune. On rainy days and in dull moments, he improved his mind by the study of English grammar, chiefly a book called Kirkham's grammar.

Here, too, he laid the foundation for his title of "Honest Abe." It is told of him that once when he inadvertently charged a customer six and one-quarter cents too much, he walked three miles, after the store closed, to return the money. He made a similar reparation when he discovered that the scales he had used to weigh out a pound of tea were not accurates.

His biographers do not mention what his salary was, but it is recorded that his employer, Mr. Offuts, had paid him 50 cents a day to take a flatboat and cargo down to New Orleans the previous spring. Mr. Offuts had too many irons in the fire, and his business, as Lincoln put it, "petered out."

Before the store was fairly closed, however, and the clerk out of employment, the governor of Illinois called for volunteers for the Black Hawk war, and Lincoln immediately enlisted, in April, 1832. Very much to his surprise, he was elected captain of the volunteer company.

On his return from the war in August, 1832, he went into a partnership with William F. Barry to conduct a grocery store in New Salem. Lincoln had no money, but his reputation for scrupulous honesty immediately established his credit. The venture proved unsuccessful, and the partner untrustworthy. He decamped, leaving Lincoln to take the responsibility for the joint indebtedness. It was seventeen years before Lincoln was able, from his modest earning as a lawyer, to clear up this indebtedness. STUDY OF CLASSICAL LANGUAGES

The so-called dead languages are coming to life again, according to Dean Andrew Fleming West of the Princeton Graduate School and President of the American Classical League, who declares that the classics, for a long while neglected by students in colleges and universities, are regaining their place in American institutions of learning. According to figures compiled by the Dean, Latin heads the list with approximately 1,000,000 students throughout America now studying the language of the ancient Romans. Dean West is an ardent advocate of the classics as an entrance requirement to American universities. When it is considered that, apart from its cultural value, the study of Latin and Greek is indispensable for a knowledge of scientific nomenclature, it is not surprising that the classical languages are coming back to their own. —Buffalo Echo.

COLLEGE HAPPENINGS

Half of the school year is over and those heart-rending and nerve-tickling semi-finals are passed. Most of the students have passed this lap of their journey toward education successfully. Some have perhaps only "slipped by." For them and also for those who have been more successful in the grind there is room for improvement. Remember that the faculty has agreed upon a rule that reads something to the effect that all students who make at least a 90 percent grade in their respective branches are exempt from the final examinations. Keep this fresh in your memory and the finals might be something of the past.

Lincoln's Birthday was celebrated in the class room. Classes were dismissed after the first afternoon period.

Since the dedication of our little Chapel much has been done to improve our place of worship. All the improvements have been realized through the contributions of kind friends and benefactors.

Various donations have been made by some kind benefactors who do not allow us to mention their names. Nevertheless the sacristans, to whom these secrets have been confided, feel it is their duty to at least record the fact and by means of the college paper express to such and all other benefactors the heartfelt thanks and appreciation of the students.

Regular services are held in our Chapel. Mass is said daily at 6:45 a. m., at which many receive holy communion and the rosary is prayed for our benefactors. On Sunday the first mass is at 7 o'clock and at 9 o'clock is high mass and sermon. On Saturday and Sunday evening at 8 o'clock is devotion and benediction. During Lent devotions will be held on Wednesday and Friday evenings.

Musings of F. C. Werth after the semi-finals:
The laurel crown above my head
Has fallen down, its leaves are dead.
To which Murphy good naturedly replied:
Scepter and crown must topple down
When old exam gives us a slam.

WHAT HAVE YOU DONE TODAY?

We shall do much in the years to come;
But what have we done today?
De shall give our gold in a princely sum;
But what did we give today?
We shall lift the heart and dry the tear,
We shall plant a hope in the place of fear,
We shall speak the words of love and sheer;
But what did we speak today?

We shall be so kind in the after-while;
But what have we been today?
We shall bring to each lonely life a smile;
But what have we brought today?
We shall give to truth a grander birth,
We shall feed the hungry souls of earth;
But, this is the thing our hearts must ask:
What have we done today?

Alumni and Former Students

Dominic A. Vonfelt, '24 is coaching the St. Fidelis High School Basketball team.

Daniel Pfeifer, '25 has found time to referee basketball games. Dan is at present, manager of an elevator at Toulon.

Two of the alumni have their hat in the political ring. Earnest J. Malone, '17 is candidate for the County Attorney and Alois Schmidt, '24 is a candidate for the office of Clerk of the District Court. Success to both.

Edmund A. Karlin, '19 and Mrs. Karlin are the proud parents of a baby boy. They have given him the name Gerald. Congratulations!

Joseph Wm. Staab, '19 and Mrs. Staab are happy over the arrival of a baby daughter. She now bears the name Mary Agnes. Sincere felicitations!

Barthol G. Herman, '22 was met on the streets of Hays one day recently and immediately, even before being approached on the subject, handed over a dollar to pay for his subscription to the JOURNAL. He does not want to be without it.

Barthol is clerk in the bank at Liebhenthal.

The same does not happen when some other alumni are met. But one thing is appreciated and that is that alumni do not fail to make themselves acquainted with priests whom they might meet.

Felix Roth, '24 must have inclinations to study law, judging from the fact that he is so interested in the Revised Statutes of Kansas. Felix comes to borrow this book almost every week. The College and Faculty are always willing, glad and ready to help any of the old "grads" if at all possible. Come and call!

Here is a new "line" on the two Linuses, Linus Basgall '25 and Linus Jacobs '25. They made a trip to Wichita to consult a specialist. Linus Jacobs had to discontinue his studies at Notre Dame on account of eye trouble. The Journal hopes that nothing serious will develop and that both will soon be well.

Bernard G. Huser, '23 has received his teacher's certificate and is now 'holding forth' in a district school near Victoria. Congratulations and success!

Another alumnus, Romuald A. Leiker, '15, has announced his candidacy for the office of County Clerk. Success to you!

Mark J. Ryan, 19 and Lawrence H. Ryan, '23 with their mother visited the college on their way home from Salina. Call again!

Leo J. Ryan '25 has sent in his subscription price and promised to canvass for the JOURNAL. Waiting for results.

Catholics and the National Capital

The District of Columbia State Council of the Knights of Columbus, has through offering prizes for the best essay on the subject "The Part Played by Catholics in the Establishment of the Seat of Government in the District of Columbia" brought to light some significant but often forgotten facts demonstrating that Catholics had a dominant part in the establishment of Washington, capital city of the nation. To mention just a few things.

The bulk of the ground on which Washington stands had been owned since the time of the Red Men by Catholics and was sold to the Government at a very small figure.

The brilliant young engineer who planned the city originally and whose plan is still being followed today a century after his labors were performed was Pierre Charles L'Enfant, a Catholic, who came to this country with Lafayette.

The architect who designed the White House, the Capitol, the Treasury, the Patent Office and the present District Courts of Justice was a young Irish Catholic, James Hoban of Charleston, S. C.

One of three Commissioners named to establish and develop the city of Washington was the Catholic, Daniel Carroll, of Rock Creek and the first Mayor of Washington, appointed by President Jefferson was Judge Robert Brent a Catholic and a nephew of Archbishop Carroll.

Franzoni, the celebrated Italian sculptor who decorated the Capitol was a Catholic.

By such contests as the one sponsored by the Knights of the District many things of interest can be unearthed and perhaps also things of an historical value, and therefore should be encouraged throughout the country. —B. J. R.

Here also is the State Teachers College for those who need teachers' training, and here are wonderful opportunities for musical training in all lines.

MUSIC

Plato has said, "Music is a moral law. It gives a soul to the universe, wings to the mind, flight to the imagination, a charm to sadness and gaiety and life to everything. It is the essence of order and leads to all that is good, just and beautiful." What more could you expect from one subject?

How essential music is in the educational field can be driven home when we read that Dr. John J. Tigert United States Commissioner of Education, says, "After the Three R's comes Music." Every day babies cry for music, children dance to it, we rest by it, we get married by it, and our friends see to it that we have it at our funerals.

Music is the most ancient of Arts. Even before life commenced upon this earth, it was here in the winds and the waves; when the first trees, flowers and grasses appeared it was among them.

When man came, music became the most delicate, the most subtle and the most powerful medium for the expression of his emotions. In all ages, it inspired men with hope, kindled their love, gave a voice to their joys, cheered them on to valourous deeds and soothed them in times of despair. Through its influence human nature has been uplifted, sweetened and refined; and with the aid of men it has become a Fine Art—from Tubalcain to Thomas Edison.

Music has myriads of voices and instruments. It is in the hearts and on the tongues of all men, in all lands and among all people: the ignorant and the unlettered know it, not less than the rich and learned. For it speaks to all men, in a language that all understand; even the deaf hear it, if they but listen to the voices of their own souls.

It is the food of love. It has taught men gentleness and peace; and has led them onward to heroic deeds. It comforts the lonely and harmonizes the discord of crowds. How glowingly Shakespeare sings the praises of music:

"When gripping grief the heart doth wound,

And doleful dumps the mind oppress,

Then music with her silver sounds,
With speedy help doth lend redress."

"Thus true music, Heaven's precious gift to man, is relished by all creatures as so fitly expressed in the sentiments."—Plato.

COLLEGE SOPH STUFF

A few weeks ago the College Sophs were "all" loaded down with hard work and they were "all" overcome with worries on account of the semi-finals, so that they were "all" tired out for a whole week. But now they are "all" over the spell; they are starting out from the beginning again and they are "all" trying to surpass the ninety mark this semester which will dispense them from the final examinations.

Someone compared the "big four" with an old Ford car which never hits on four. He said that Bollig and Vinc miss out because they are jealous of Babe and Ted being such good singers. And he says Babe and Ted miss out because they are jealous of Bollig and Vinc being so good in Latin and Greek. This is all a mistake. The big four has always stuck together in fight and in fun and they always will as long as it is possible to do so.

The big four have selected as their motto: "P-E-P". "P" stands for personality and politeness, "E" for energy and earnestness, "P" for push and pluck.

Says Teddy: Betting on a losing team leaves one cold in the fresh "owe"-zone.

Since the cross-word puzzle fad has died out we notice an oversupply of erasers in the "stationary" department.

Talking of cross-word puzzles, Father Director good humoredly suggested that students should try to fashion their accounts after cross-word puzzles—get them squared up.

SENIOR CLASS NOTES

The American History class have completed their course with wonderful success, and are now busy studying the Constitution of the United States.

We are most happy to say that at the end of the first semester Julius Bahl is leading the class with his report. Congratulations, "Bally"! We are proud of you!

The class rings have been received and of course they are the best ones ever worn by any graduation class.

Since nearly all objects have a north and a south pole, Fisher thinks he is no exception. He thinks he has the north seeking pole in his head.

"Humanism" is the rediscovery of Latin and Greek. Oberle thinks Latin and Greek are superhuman.

DR. KERBY DEFINES CATHOLIC EDUCATION

In an address held for the students of Trinity College, Washington, D. C., the Rev. William J. Kerby, Ph.D., of the Catholic University defined the meaning of Catholic education. He said, in part:

"It (Catholic education) aims to substitute the direction of life for the habit of drifting with life. It aims to give the students right direction, and to displace every tendency toward mistaken direction of purpose, effort and spirit. The right direction which the college aims to give is fixed by the teaching of Jesus Christ, by the axiom of Christian culture, by the Christian law of social relation, and by the high spiritual compensations that are in keeping of God. The college aims so to teach the principles of self-control, and of self-discipline, so to interpret human obligations, so to widen the power of fine appreciation, as to enable the students to shape their individual purposes in harmony with the plans of God. It seeks to give them social and spiritual power beyond their personal need in order that they may contribute generously through influence, service and example to the upbuilding of the Kingdom of God in the heart of humanity. It aims so to chasten the valuations which guide them and the delights which allure them, as to make them effective interpreters of the harmony of Divine life, each in his own particular sphere."

There is a world of meaning in the foregoing few sentences and all students, as well as alumni of our Catholic colleges would do well to consider them seriously and often.—N. C. W. C. Bulletin.

CHARACTER BUILDING AND THE SMALL COLLEGE

The Saturday Evening Post some time ago published an appeal under the heading, "Strengthen the Small College," which rather than the big university, is the backbone of higher education in the United States. We quote a paragraph or two:

"The very limitations of the small institution preserve it from danger of becoming unwieldy, top-heavy, or over-extended. What it lacks in plant it makes up for in personnel. Its very smallness encourages individuality rather than standardization. The human contacts are closer. Men play a larger and freer part. They are not overwhelmed by rules, buildings, overwide choice of courses, complex social life and over-elaborate administration. There is as much to be said for the simple life in education as in the world at large. In all essentials a college is merely a group of teachers and learners. A dozen young men gathered in a shady place might be the kernel of an institution of the soundest learning, if only a Plato sat in their midst.

"Associated with the large universities are great and learned men by the score; but as students multiply, their work must become more and more executive in its nature. They must distribute their courses among more subordinates and suffer their own personalities to be diluted by those of their assistants. Whether they will or no, they must face the problems of mass production."

The Post points to a real difficulty which is beginning to make itself felt in the great universities with their thousands of students. The personal touch, the direct influence of teacher upon student, is lacking. This lack may not be so greatly felt in the case of graduate or special professional courses, which are taken by students who have had their general education under the direct touch and influence of teachers whose energies were not distributed over several thousands of students. But a university which is faced with "the problems of mass production," to use the Post's phrase, is at a certain disadvantage as compared with the smaller college in respect of the most vital thing which enters into the education of young men—namely: character building under the direct influence and supervision of teachers who are well fitted to do that delicate and essential work.—Fortnightly Review.

Our class play: "The Freedom of the Press" made a great hit at the Holy Name Smoker February 14. Thanks to Father Camillus who is our English professor.

The new cable to connect Great Britain and the United States via Newfoundland is finished and will be laid early in 1926. It is claimed that it will not only be workable at the hitherto unheard of speed of 2,500 meters, or 500 words per minute both ways simultaneously, but will make it possible to operate several separate circuits without in any way interfering one with the other.

Officially the geographical center of the United States is 39 degrees, 13 minutes, 26.636 seconds west latitude and 98 degrees, 32 minutes and 30.506 seconds north longitude. These figures show that the central spot is on the Meade ranch, about ten miles north of Lucas, Russell County, Kansas.
