TWENTY-FIRST TERM BEGINS

School Opens with Solemn High Mass Wednesday, September 12

On September 12, the Hays Catholic College opened its twenty-first scholastic term. The school year commenced with a solemn high mass of invocation to the Holy Ghost.

The Rev. Father Justin, director of the College, was celebrant, assisted by the Rev. Father Dennis, prefect, as deacon, and Rev. Father Mathias as subdeacon. The acolytes were Ernest Weigel and Ernest Beilman; Fred Huser and Carl Wolf were censer and boat bearer. The faculty choir under the direction of Fr. Alfred sang the mass.

All the students attended the ceremonies in a body. A large number of friends was also present for the occasion. After the mass the students gathered in the assembly room where the Reverend Director welcomed them and exhorted them to make this a banner year in every respect. On Thursday morning classes were resumed.

The faculty for the year is as follows:

- The Rev. Father Justin, O. M. Cap., director
- The Rev. Father Florence, O. M. Cap.
- The Rev. Father Alfred, O. M. Cap.
- The Rev. Father Camillus, O. M. Cap.
- The Rev. Father Matthew, O. M. Cap.
- The Rev. Father Denis, O. M. Cap., Prefect
- The Rev. Father Mathias, O. M. Cap.
- The Rev. Father Vergil, O. M. Cap., Prefect

SIX LETTERMEN ANSWER

Twenty-one Rookies Respond to Call of Coach Lane

Captains Walters and Drees, Stanton, Schlyer, Peay and Boucher, lettermen of last year's football squad are out to help brighten the grid prospects for '28'. The rookie prospects are fair. Some of the new men show up very well. Those who are out to make their letter this year in attempts to become honored pigskin warriors for the blue and white are Alfred Giebler, Harold Mackey, Albert Speis, Fridolin Wasinger, Roy Eaton, Henry Leiker, Richard Leiker, Vernon Lunz, Clarence Tasset, Edward Schrieber, Alfred Koch, Edwin Schmidt, Emil Beilman, Albert Bedard, Frank Steckline and Sylvanus Jacobs.

ATTENDING UNIVERSITY

The Rev. Fathers Herbert and Richard, O. M. Cap., of last year's faculty, are in Washington, D. C., this year working for their Master of Arts degree at the Catholic University of America. Both are majoring in education, with Fr. Herbert taking chemistry and Fr. Richard studying history as a minor course. We wish them full success, a pleasant year, and a safe return to dear old H. C. C.

NEWMAN CLUB MEETS

Election of Officers, and Interest in the Society Urged

The H. C. C. Newman club held its first meeting of the year on Sept. 13, at 10:30 a. m. The meeting was called to order by Rev. Father Dennis, moderator of the society. The Reverend Moderator urged more interest in the affairs of the Newman Club, especially in the staging of plays and in literary contributions to the school paper.

The following officers were elected:

- President, John Grabbe, '29
- Vice-Pres., Alfred Giebler, '29
- Secretary, Oscar Vogel, '29.

Plans for the annual Newman Club play were discussed. The play will be staged before Christmas.

John Grabbe and Clarence Tasset were appointed librarians.

Two home games in a row. Stockton vs. Hays, September 28, Otis vs. Hays October 5.

REGISTRATION DAY

Both Cheer and Gloom in Evidence Tuesday, September 11

On Tuesday, September 11th, a large number of boys filled in their registration cards thereby officially entering the ranks of the H. C. C. student body for the year 1928-1929. A few boys have been detained on account of urgent work at home but within the next few days we hope to have our enrollment complete.

Most of the boys were bright and happy and glad to get back to school. A few, however, returned with a slight expression of gloom on their countenances. But after they got into the swing of things they soon brightened up and now every student in the institution is in the best of spirits.

You'll get more than your money's worth by buying a season's ticket. See the boys play Stockton on September 28 and Otis on October 5.

GRID PROSPECTS NOT BEST

"Rotten," said Coach Lane. "The poorest material I've had in three years," was Coach Lane's answer to the question: "How is the football outlook for this year?" But the writer differs with Coach Lane. Who ever saw Lew Lane optimistic over any football or basketball team that was in his charge? The fact that he is pessimistic over his charges is a good recommendation for the coach. True enough, the loss of our two stellar backs, the Werth boys, would be enough to cause any coach grief, as there are very few high school backs who could fill their berths, and we have had no signs of any one on our squad doing so this year. We have some very good backfield material in Stanton and Geibler, and what's the matter with the rest of our backs? Captain Walters is showing up well at fullback. Boucher and Schlyer, both letter men, are back at quarter.

Coach Lane also made the remark that our line was weak. Judging from the showing the line made in our first scrimmage with the Hays High School, we must say this is true. But again we can not expect the team to do as well in the first game of the season as it did last Thanksgiving Day. Captain Drees is showing up well at his regular position at center, while Peay, Tasset, Spies and Logan look good at guard and tackles, and at the end positions Mackey, Ross and Bedard are doing fairly well. The coach may be a little more pessimistic than he should be, but if there is any fight in the boys he will certainly bring it out before many games. Don't fail to see the first battle of the season when the H. C. A. plays Stockton at the H. C. A. grounds Friday, Sept. 28. It will be well worth your time and money to come and see the brand of football the H. C. A. boys are going to display.

So let's back the home team from start to finish and play every play with the boys on the sidelines. It has been proven often in the past that a few cheers from the spectators help a lot to win a game. Just remember the days when you too perhaps were playing on the H. C. A. eleven; how much you appreciated the fact that you knew the home gang was behind you. So let's go out and help the boys win on the 28th.

THE CATHOLIC HIGH SCHOOL

Popular education has taken a firm grasp on the present generation. At no time since the thirteenth century, has such a desire and demand for knowledge swept over the face of the earth as today. The millionaire's son as well as the poor child of the city gutter, the artisan's and the merchant's boy, all follow in the one path of education. It is the fad of the hour, it is THE thing today.

You go out to seek a position. A placard in the window of some business house greets your eye: "Stenographer wanted" or "Salesman wanted." You seek an interview with the manager of the firm. The first question, nine times out of ten, that your prospective employer will ask you is: "Have you had a high school education?" If you can answer in the affirmative, you are already half sure of the position; if in the negative, you are almost sure to be rejected.

In a certain town not far from here, there were two girls who had aspirations towards the teaching profession. The death of the mother in the case of the one and equally distressing circumstances in the case of the other, made it impossible for the girls to acquire a high school education. An opportunity of entering a training school presented itself. They went to Kansas City to apply for admission in a model hospital. But here they met an insurmountable barrier. "Have you been through high school?" they were asked. Since they could only answer in the negative, they were forced to retrace their steps homeward.

There are men and women who have achieved success without a high school education. But they are the exception. Their chief claim to success lay in their exceptional ability, or, perhaps, in pure luck. What a man achieved a decade or two ago without an education, could hardly be done today. Today there is so much intensive competition in every field of endeavor, that it is only the man or woman with a higher education that can succeed. Those who came to these regions years ago when the country was still in the making, forged ahead through sheer natural ability and largely because the field was all their own. Had there been a number of men in the same profession running one another competition, then, most assuredly, the one with the higher education would have won out. And were these same men to come into our towns today, and try to set up a business as they did of yore, they would have a small chance with the men of higher education in the field today.

The high school but continues to build upon the foundation laid by the parochial school. The purpose of education is to bring into full blossom all the faculties of the mind and soul and body with which the individual is endowed; to bring them to a state of perfection where they may help him to do fully his human part, that thereby he may work out his own destiny and make the world at least a little better for his having lived. An education without moral training is, therefore, a defective training, because one of the fundamental objects of education is neglected.

In the Catholic school the moral training keeps pace with the intellectual training. Here a complete education is imparted. The intellect is sharpened by a means of the sciences, the languages and the arts; the character is formed by being made to follow the routine of the school; and the heart is enobled by the benign influence of our holy faith. Education must be a training of the mind, heart and body. In many institutions, more stress is placed on the training of the mind and body. The education of the heart is ignored.

It is still good pedagogy to heed the words of the Divine Teacher: "What doth it profit a man if he gain the whole world and suffer the loss of his soul?" The place for the Catholic boy and Catholic girl is in the Catholic High School.—L. W.

ST. FRANCIS, THE STUDENT

We all love to read and speak about St. Francis, the "Poverello" of Assisi. The very name possesses a magic thrill. It brings joy and consolation to the poor and lowly; it calls forth love and respect from the rich. Everyone claims him as his own. To think that such a simple and poverty-loving soul should command the love and enthusiasm of a pleasure-seeking and money-mad world is passing strange. What could account for such universal attraction, such devotional loyalty to our Saint of Assisi? It is because he has a personal message for each individual in every walk of life.

St. Francis bears many titles, but he is scarcely ever spoken of as a student. Still I love to think of him as a student. True, our Saint did not enjoy the privilege of a college education: he may have been totally ignorant of the higher studies. Nevertheless, Francis was a real student. His text book was the one which lies open before each and every one of us—this grand creation. It was this Divine Picture Book given by the Creator to his little servant Francis, that was to teach him to live the knowledge he had acquired.

Nature was Francis' text book; and we know how tenderly he loved it, how his keen sense of observation and affection grew day by day, so that his deep understanding of nature was never surpassed. All creation seemed sympathetic to his bidding, it was a mutual understanding between a pure creation and a pure soul.

We read of the beautiful incident between St. Francis and the flock of birds which he encountered on his way to Spoleto. He addressed them with simple words of admonition and not a bird moved a wing until he gave them his blessing to fly away. On another occasion, a multitude of swallows were twittering noisily while Francis preached a sermon. Their song was a disturbance; so he bade them be silent till he had finished speaking. True enough, not a one gave a sound, nor made a stir till they were granted liberty. The oft told scene between Francis and the Wolf of Gubbio likewise gives proof of the wonderful sympathy between Francis and Nature.

Nature was his teacher. Everyone had a message for him, and his heart was well attuned to receive its gentle whisperings. In the lamb he saw the image of the Lamb led to the slaughter on Calvary. The beautiful lily mirrored for him the splendor of a spotless and immaculate soul. Fire told him of divine beauty and generosity. The very stones of earth reminded him of Christ the Rock. The stars of the heavens portrayed to him brotherly peace and harmony. The sight of the sun enraptured him with such joy, that it conjured from out of his poetic soul that immortal song, "The Cantic of the Sun."

Indeed, all things were an object of admiration and love to him; all were his brothers and sisters. They taught him to love his Creator, his fellowmen,—to live the knowledge he had acquired.

This is the message St. Francis brings to our High School students of today, to live one's knowledge. The High School student, in pursuit of higher studies, seeking to build a character and to lay a strong foundation for life, needs this message of St. Francis. An education which does not raise the heart and soul to the Creator, and does not give an incentive to lead a better life, cannot merit the name of education.—T. G.

A FRESHY'S LETTER HOME

Hays, Kansas
Sept. 17, 1928

Dear Parents:

I arrived at the college safe and in good time, and I like it very much so far, much better than I thought I would. Now I would go to no other school than Hays College, because this is just the place for us boys. One of my friends is here, too, and I have already made other friends among the boarders. There are a lot of boarders here and twenty-seven freshmen in our class. I like all my teachers, and couldn't have expected any better ones.

We are about settled down now for real work. We had a few lessons in all our subjects so far and most of them seem a bit hard, but I know they will be getting better after a while, when I begin to get more used to them. As far as I have read in my physical geography, I think I'll like it best of all. I am taking Latin, too. I do not like it very well, but we must do many things we do not like.

Please send me my music book and cornet. Our music lessons start this week and I do not want to miss any.

I wish I could go out for football. There are 20 boys out for practice. Coach takes the squad out to the field every afternoon. For the first half hour or so he puts them all through drills and exercises to limber up their joints and muscles and make them strong. Then for an hour or more he teaches them how to play the game. We are going to have a very good team this year and I wish I could play along.

I like the town of Hays real well. It is a very big town and there are fine people living in it. But I could hardly sleep the first night on account of the trains going through the town. A large new college is being built on a fine location just out of the town. It is not finished, because there is not enough money to keep building. But when it is finished, we shall have a wonderful school.

Well, how is everything at home? Are you getting along all right without me? I hope so. And how are Sister and Brother? I intend to study as hard as I can this year. One thing some of the boys don't like is the evening study hour. But I think it is a very good idea, because it gives us a time to prepare our lessons and the Father in charge of the classes sees that we do them. Our class has one room for studies and another for recitation. We have study period now, and I had a little time so I wrote a letter to you.

Write to me as soon as you can and tell me what everybody at home is doing.

The Boy's Lament at Passing of Summer

Too soon has summer flown away,
And autumn holds imperial sway.
The birds have gone—they sing no more—
They've winged their flight to distant shore.

But yesterday the leaves were gay,
And basking in the sun's bright ray,
Green, crimson, golden, yellow, brown,—
Now rain and wind have cast them down.

The brooklet laughs no more, I know,
But sluggishly moves on so slow,
'Tween banks where once all was so fair,
With flowers blooming everywhere.

But now the grass is seered and dead,
The flowers from the field have fled,
The gloomy trees stand mourning 'round,
Their erstwhile beauty on the ground.

E'en though sweet summer's days are o'er,
And winter's standing at the door,
I know full well the melting snows
Next year will bring the fragrant rose.

SENIOR NOTES

The enrollment of the Senior Class this year is twelve including: Clarence Drees, Hays, Leo Roth, Hays, Oscar Vogel, Dodge City, Fred Weisner, Hays, Dick Brull, Hays, Clarence Tasset, Spearville, Joseph Schueler, Hays, Fritz Wasinger, Hays, John Grabbe, Hays, Anthony Weisner, Hays, Albert Spies, Hays, and Alfred Giebler, Hays.

Boys who reported for football practice Sept. 12 representing the Senior Class are: Clarence Drees, (Capt.), Tuff Spies, Clarence Tasset, and Alfred Giebler.

All three Seniors have reported for their classes and are hard at work.

The Seniors are proud to say that they have a man heavier than "Stiny" Peay. This said man is "Tiny" Tasset weighing only 248 lbs.

The Seniors held a class meeting Sept. 17, electing Tony Weisner as President, Leo Roth, as Vice-President, and John Grabbe as Secretary. Alfred Giebler was appointed class reporter for the year of '28-'29.

Tuff Spies is nursing a sore arm which he received in football practice.

The Seniors have a nice tan complexion caused by—we wonder what. The sun?

The Seniors are carrying four "heavy" subjects this year. Physics taught by Rev. Fr. Justin, Book-keeping by Prof. Weigel, English, by Rev. Fr. Dennis, and Shorthand by Prof. Weigel.

Dick Brull, Oscar Vogel, and Clarence Drees arrived a few days late for class.

Tuff Spies spent the month of August in the training camp at Ft. Leavenworth. Boy! You should see him now.

"Swede" Drees, Captain of this years football team is "showing up" well in practice. He's the same old "Swede" with a lot of fight and drive.

From the conversation heard in the class rooms the boys must have worked pretty hard this summer and were glad to get back to school.

John Grabbe is Coach Lane's assistant in football. Lane was a star-halfback on the St. Mary's team and Creighton, while John was a star-tackle on the H. C. C. football squad of '27. 'Nuf ced'.

direction of Fr. Mathias are hard at work putting the tennis court in shape so that it may soon see service.

During the summer vacation the court was neglected, and weeds got the better of it. Plans are now under consideration to put a layer of clay on it, and if this is done it will make our court one of the best in the city.

It has been rumored that the student team will soon challenge the faculty tennis team for a match. The student team is going to try to avenge the humiliation they suffered at the hands of Father Dennis and Lew Lane last spring. It is without a doubt that the student team will do their utmost to recover their lost prestige, and to accomplish the rather difficult feat of defeating the far superior faculty team.

JUNIOR JOLTS

The Junior class comprises eighteen members.

Our professors are, Fathers Justin, Florence, Matthew and Coach Lane, for the commercials, and Fathers Matthew, Dennis, Virgil, and Coach Lane for the classicals. At the class election held last Tuesday the following officers were elected. Hilary Weigel President, and Virgil Basgall, class reporter.

Some of the Juniors evidently have not gotten over the fact that they are now stately Juniors instead of sophomores as we have seen a number of them trying to follow the Sophomore schedule instead of the Junior.

A number of boys from our class are out to make the football squad.

The other day when the Juniors elected class officers and Weigel was unanimously elected President he gave a very touching speech. It was as follows: "I am not going to thank you for having elected me because I did not want the job; but I'm going to tell you what my platform is, I'm all wet."

Joe and Lucius Schmidt attended the wedding dance of Joe's brother. Lucius came in with half-closed eyes, probably from staying out late that night.

The classical Juniors all agree that our Greek Class is the most interesting class we are having this year.

Fritz Wasinger, one of the dignified Seniors is taking Latin and Greek with the worthy Juniors.

Froelich intended to continue taking music lessons but as soon as he was told he was not allowed to appear on the stage in public he gave up hopes of ever becoming a musical genius and also gave up his musical aspirations.

REFLECTION ON HIGHER EDUCATION

The opening of a new school year finds thousands of young persons in pursuit of higher education seeking admittance into high schools and academies. It is hardly an exaggeration to say that the majority of these young folks have at best a rather vague idea of what they are to encounter and the reason of it all. It is true that they may know, or pretend to know, that a high school education will be of benefit to them in the shaping of their lives; that higher education will raise their position in life to a level which they could not hope to attain without it—results which are certainly an ample reward for the work and expense of the course, but the manner in which this subtle and mysterious change is to be wrought is scarcely understood.

It may puzzle them to suppose that the study of Latin, a language which has been considered dead for many years, or Greek, especially, when its present status is considered; or biology, or literature or almost any of the subjects included in the course can raise their position in life.

The answer to their perplexities can be summed up in a word—culture. The study of latin most probably will never win one a comfortable and coveted position, Greek may never be the means of a desired increase of salary, but their influence will mark one as somewhat above the ordinary as a person of culture.

It is proverbial that our associations can be traced in our character. With this thought in mind we might say that a high school education is priceless, since it introduces us into circles of the greatest minds of the world. Higher education draws back the curtains from the past and reviews for us all that was glorious and noble in the ages that were, all that the race gathers and cherishes from the shifting cycles of time. It unfolds to us the glory of ancient Greece reaching even in those distant times a level in artistic creation which has hardly been equalled and never surpassed in all the ages that have followed. An entire people whose national trait was an exquisite aesthetical temperament, a people whose love of beauty was boundless, a nation of artists. It brings to our notice the epics of the Greek poet Homer, written as is thought about the ninth century B.C., which remain unsurpassed among the great epics; and his name is spoken with those of Dante and Shakespeare as the greatest names in all literature; the masterful orations of Demosthenes which are even now regarded as the apex of classical oratory; and modern literati have regarded Attic (Athenian) prose as "true prose" because of its rare elegance and purity. In sculpture, it is generally admitted that the Greeks were supreme. The figures of Grecian statues, the very embodiment of delicate grace and beauty, have in no age lost the admiration of those who were capable of appreciating their perfection.

Indeed, Greece had developed so many of the fine arts to such a degree that it is difficult to judge in which she really excelled the most. In view of such achievements we must all admit that we ourselves are enobled and become more cultured through the mental contact with this people which we enjoy while

The sophomore class consists of twelve members this year. All are very ambitious.

The sopohomores elected class officers on the afternoon of Wednesday, Sept. 19. Ernest Peay was elected Class President. We know no other could fulfill the office better. Harold Mackey was elected class reporter.

Raymond (Irish) Ross hit the dummy so hard in football practice the other day that he almost broke it in half. Keep it up Ross, and you will wear a big "H" at the end of the season.

Our history professor gave Fred Huser a new name this year: "Bright Eyes." Last year our agriculture professor called him "Jumping Jack". What next?

Ernest Peay, while taking a nap in the study hall said, "Where is my pony?" That shows how industrious he is.

Richard Rupp was drowsy as usual in geometry class and when our professor asked how many sides has a cube, Rupp answered "four": outside, inside, left side and right side.

After three months of hard work most of the Sophies have returned to school.

We have two new Sophies in our class: Vincent Shaffer of Liebenthal, and Henry Leiker of Munjor.

Mackey, Leiker, Eaton, Koch, Ross and Peay are out for football.

Koch received two scars over his right eye during football practice and the coach told him that would make a man out of him.

Mackey after having a hard time with Latin last year is taking second year Latin this year. All of the commercial Sophies feel sorry for him.

Coach: "What's wrong, Koch?"
Koch: (After tackling Vic Stanton.) "Oh, I'm hurt a little."
Coach: "That's good for you."

The sophomore classical class is very small this year, only three more future Latin sharks reporting.

Remark of a Professor: "The last year freshman class was the toughest bunch we have had in years. See if you can beat that, you freshies."

Father Alfred: "Leiker, how about a music lesson at 10:30?"

Leiker: (Knowing his violin was in bad condition): "Why, er, I don't know, Father."

The stragglers are still coming in. Whom have we with us? Alphonse (Rusty) Schmidt. But worst of all, he is a classical. It's hot stuff if you like it.

REGISTRATION DAY CHATTER

"Hello, old top, how're you behaving, been working hard? Haven't seen you all summer. Where have you been keeping yourself?" "Oh, I'm just fine; By the way, do you know we are going to have some real material for football this year? They say we have a two-hundred and-fifty-pounder. Aren't you going out for football?" "No, I can't make it. You are going out, aren't you?"

"Perhaps; for a couple days, anyhow. I don't believe I can do much good though." "Did you see - - well, if here isn't Charlie. How are you making it these days, Charlie? Did you sign up inside? Let's go in and register now." "You fellows will be surprised when you see what was done up-stairs. The two study halls were joined with a door. That means pipe down and behave." "We have a new Prefect this year. I wonder how he'll be for punishments." "Don't give him the impression that we had plenty of them last year." "Say, there certainly is a lot of material for the faucet this year. Some of these boys are entirely too fresh." "Let's move on, I must get some books and we can look the old town over at the same time."

"Are we to take shorthand this year?" "Yes and Prof. is going to teach it." "I heard just a few of the seniors kick about their shorthand work last year." "A fellow can easily get along with Prof. if he doesn't get too funny." "Just a minute, I must stop in here and try to get a good Eversharp." "Well, so-long fellows, I must be getting home. I'll see you all in the morning."

FIRST GAME

GOD BLESS YOU

And so, "through all thy days
May shadows touch thee never"—
But this alone: God bless thee, dear,
Then art thou safe forever.

I seek in pray'rful words, dear friend,
My heart's true wish to send you,
That you may know that far or near,
My loving thoughts attend you.

I cannot find a truer word,
Nor fonder to caress you.
Nor song nor poem I have heard
Is sweeter than "God bless you"!

God bless you! So I've wished you all
Of brightness life possesses,
For can there any joy at all
Be thine, unless God blesses?

God bless you! So I breathe a charm
Lest grief's dark night oppress you—
For how can sorrow bring you harm
If 'tis God's way to bless you?

SAVE AS YOU GO

Save as you go and you will go far; spend as you go and you'll go to the poorhouse. It is all right to be a good fellow NOW, but the good fellow of TODAY is the one that is penniless TOMORROW. Saving does not mean being miserly. It means a sensible "center of the road" position, saving a part out of each week's pay and putting it away for the future.

Why not start this week and open a Savings Account with this strong institution? Save a little each week and assure yourself that when the needs of tomorrow confront you, you will be ready to meet them.

FRESHY FROLICS

Klaus, Gerstner, Lunz and Jacobs are out for football. We expect great things from them. Watch their smoke.

Carl Wolf has a new nickname. He cries like a cat so they call him "Katty." We expect to find him up a tree some morning with a bulldog barking at him.

Our number so far is twenty-five. —not sao bad for the first few days.

Friday afternoon, Sept. 14th, we spent at the fair, where we learned how to eat fire, swallow swords, and several other things, among them we learned that our spending money decreased very considerably.

Prof: Who was Mercury?
Student: A Greek girl-goddess.

Bernard Thesing of Spearville, is a newcomer. He is pretty big. We don't think he'll get homesick so soon.

So far we have learned one great fundamental lesson, "Look out for the prefects," and with that in mind we expect to make great headway, especially, when they are around and watching us. Ask Mermis for further information.

The boarders have the advantage over the "day dogs" because of the position of the Prefect's desk. The "day dogs" can not tell whether the Prefect is watching them or not.

Gleason was not very lonely Sunday, for his father, brother, and sister and cousin were here to see him.

Warner Luetters is a new fellow from Ransom. Best Wishes.

REFLECTION OF HIGHER EDUCATION

learning their language, history and the story of their grand accomplishments.

Higher education likewise acquaints us with the Romans, the mighty conquerors and pupils of Greece, the stern rulers of the world. The natural virility of the Roman character combined with the aesthetic culture of Greek influence have produced a Literature which shares with the Greek the title "Classical Languages." The greatest name in Latin letters is that of Cicero, the orator. His writings are masterpieces of excellent style and as such are used as models in our present schools in higher learning. The name of Cicero is not the only great name in Latin literature, but his is the greatest of the great—a giant among the immortals.

To tell the praises and beneficial influence of such subjects as English literature, the masters of our own tongue, and the sciences, would prove a bit too lengthy and perhaps unnecessary since their usefulness can hardly be denied. No English speaking student will lay claim to a complete education and culture until he has had at least read Shakespeare, the greatest boast of English letters. Again the familiarity with our English and American authors lends a finish which we cannot afford to ignore. A high school education is the path to this magic land of learning and delight and we cannot help but bear away with us some of the charm which we have found there.

The charm and culture of education are desired by everyone who can possibly acquire them, not only because they make one more agreeable to his fellowmen and win a certain regard and respect for him but also, and more intensively, because of the great satisfaction and exquisite delight which he enjoys in this contact with the noble and beautiful things of life. A true appreciation of the fine arts is one of the rarest and most delightful pleasures in this world.

But, to enjoy the fruits and gain the benefits of education a degree of interest and endeavor must be aroused. We can hardly hope to imbibe the classic spirit, the true culture and at the same time ignore or even condemn the means whereby it is to be gained. There is no doubt that the beginnings may prove difficult and almost discouraging, but, as Aristotle so happily remarks, "the roots of the arts are bitter," we must foster the bitter roots until they sprout and blossom with a beauty that amply repays our care; we must foster the beginnings even though they be difficult and our reward will be true culture.—T.
