

Revive the Shelves: Linking Primary Sources and Young Adult Literature Grades 6-12

Students today are bombarded with information from multiple sources, often at the same time! How much of it is reliable, authentic, and trustworthy? How can students learn to tell the difference? How might educators help students so that evaluating sources is not such a cumbersome task?

Primary sources help answer these questions. But where does one find primary sources? What are the best ways to utilize them? How can educators promote student engagement in this discovery process?

Plan to join Colette Huxford, Media Specialist with Shenandoah School Corporation, as she explores ways to connect young adult literature to primary sources and to the E/LA Standards. Learn how to bolster students' higher-order thinking skills! Find out how to revive some of those forgotten, long overlooked titles sitting on media center shelves.

Workshop Objectives:

- Explore what primary sources are, their various formats, and where to find them
- Discover ways to link primary sources to young adult literature
- Generate interest in forgotten titles and neglected genres such as historical fiction, verse novels, multi-cultural works, and non-fiction

Date: Thursday, November 8, 2018
Times: 8:30 a.m. Registration
9:00 a.m. - 3:00 p.m. Workshop Hours
Audience: Teachers in grades 6-12, media specialists, and administrators
Cost: $110/ECESC member, $220/Non-ECESC member
Includes refreshments and hand-outs

Registration: Go to <https://goo.gl/forms/zKFE0iu4UgHk3L0t1>

Questions: Please call (800) 669-3010 or email mbarbour@ecesc.k12.in.us

