

Parents and Guardians of our Amazing Titans,

The start of this semester has been interesting to say the least. We want to take this opportunity to clarify a few ways you can help make sure your student is staying on target in his or her classes.

- During remote days, all students should have multiple assignments to do. Each teacher will be posting something related to their content for the students to complete by 8:35 am. Attendance is based upon completion of each assignment or activity given by each teacher each day.
- Each teacher is available during Remote Learning via the Google Meet link posted on their home page or in their modules to answer questions. The questions do not need to be limited to the assignments for the Remote Days. If your student needs help on previous work, please encourage them to join the Meet and get the help they need. The schedule below is for their Google Meet office hours but they will answer emails throughout the day.
- We are struggling across the board with students meeting deadlines and due dates. Please make it a habit to have your student show you that they submitted their work in Canvas for each of their courses. You should see the time stamp on the assignment when they submit it properly. Please help us turn the tide on the lack of concern that many students are showing concerning timelines.
- As always, one of the most beneficial things your students can do to help them improve academically is read on their own. Encourage your student to find something that interests them and read for the joy of reading. It will help their comprehension and vocabulary which will help in every subject.
