

	<h3>Moral Courage</h3> The goals of this unit are to study in depth how each generation receives guidance and instruction concerning morals and values; to be exposed to stories of people who demonstrated moral responses; to consider how we may act on principle to do what is right and the risks encountered; and to identify theoretical works that help us understand human development as it relates to moral courage.
	Poetry — Puppetry — Performance After a study of the creativity of Jim Henson and the history of puppetry, students will create an original screenplay with some poetic devices and create puppets in a style of their choice, props, and backdrops for a unique performance.
	<h3>Bewitched, Bothered and Bewildered by the Internet</h3> More and more millennials are turning to the internet for education and information. The internet is everywhere. Is it a blessing or a curse? Does the utilization of these resources extend learning or does it encourage short cuts for the bare minimum? Finally, what about misinformation? What is real news and how do you evaluate or facts check what you see?
