Pronunciation Debate

Is it pronounced caramel or carmel? Does crayon have two syllables or one? How do you pronounce pecan; pee-KAHN, pi-KAHN, PEE-kan, PEE-kahn? In this issue of Central Scoop, we will finally reveal which pronunciations are correct.

Caramel - The correct spelling is “caramel,” but both pronunciations are technically correct. Carmel is actually a name for people and places, while caramel is the candy many people have had pronunciation arguments about for a long time. “Carmel” is more popular west of the Ohio river. “Caramel” is more popular east of the Ohio River.

Crayon - Both common pronunciations for “crayon” are correct. It is more commonly pronounced with two syllables, “cray-on,” but many people say it with one syllable, sounding like “cran.” Fun fact, crayon is also a verb meaning “to draw with a crayon.”

Pecan - In the dictionary, only two correct pronunciations for “pecan” are listed: “pə'kän” and “pē,kan.” The two sound like “pee-KAHN” and “pi-KAN.” Some dictionaries list other pronunciations, but those are the most commonly listed as correct.

Route - If you say route like “rowt” or “root,” you are saying it correctly. However, “root” is the more British pronunciation. “Rowt” (rhyming with “trout”) is the more American pronunciation.

Summary: Fahrenheit 451 is a dystopian novel about Guy Montag, who is a fireman. All his life he had always assumed firemen only burnt down houses with books in them rather than stopping the fire. His wife, friends, and coworkers always ignore the fact they are burning books. Until one day he meets his new neighbor, Clarisse, who makes him think otherwise. This gave him a new mindset and nobody could stop him from reaching it...nothing.

June and Anden have a lot of work to do: keep the Republic from losing the war, cure the plague, keep the people in check, negotiate assistance from Antartica, hunt down all of the dissenters (and Thomas and Commander Jameson), train a new Princeps-Elect, and everything else a failing nation requires to pull through a war. Plus, the Colonies are out to kill her, and she might not even survive this war in the first place, let alone deal with it. But, more importantly, how will her love for Day survive if her guilt of causing him so much pain causes her to pull away? Day is losing his mind. The side effects of the Republic's experimentations on him are gradually killing him; he's no longer the guy he used to be. He can barely watch as Tess, Eden, Kaede, and June give their all to the war efforts--for the better or for the worse--while his body fails him. How much longer does he have to live? And how will his love for June live on if she's the one who bring him so much grief every day?

The war between the Colonies and the Republic is escalating. It's taking its toll on Anden, June, Day, and the rest of the country. How will it all end? Though, will they even survive long enough to make it to that point?

Student Spotlight

This month, we are highlighting students from sixth grade that have done an outstanding job with staying on top of things and putting in extra effort with their everyday work. These students are Madeline Roth, Erica Wiese, Ella Bugos, Julian Ortiz, Ethan Kopinski, and Jake Faulkner. Congratulations!

Staff Spotlight

For this month, we asked some sixth grade students who their favorite teachers were. The two they came up with the most were Mrs. Uftring and Mrs. Martin. Congratulations on creating captivating and interactive classes that many of your students enjoy!

Extracurriculars

The sign-language is an academic club that meets every month. It's run by Mrs. Fogle and she helps the students learn different parts of sign-language. There are two different levels of this club-- the regular and advanced clubs. To be in the advanced club, a student must have at least one year of prior experience in the club.

Narrative

Something Unknown by Ellie Reetz and Lilly McGreevy

All around me, people walked around with colorful lights in tiny, thin boxes. They tapped on the boxes and put their ear up to the boxes. Some of them talked to the boxes. I approached a child sitting on a bench, staring at a box. There were people inside the box! They were singing a strange song. "How did that person get stuck in there!" I yelled. The child turned around and screamed. What was he so startled of? I ran from the bench into a crowded place.

As I walked by, children pinched their noses. Did I smell bad? Embarrassed, I entered a strange building. Something smelled very pleasant. I wondered if it was the perfume that the wealthy royals wore back home.

“Can I help you?” a woman asked.

“What is that delightful fragrance?” I responded.

“Dollars?”

Fun Facts

- President Coolidge started the National Christmas Tree Lighting Ceremony on the White House lawn in 1923. Teddy Roosevelt banned the Christmas tree from the White House for environmental reasons.
- December is the Human Rights month.
- Male reindeer shed their antlers in winter, so the reindeer pulling Santa’s sleigh are more than likely female.
