Pocket Count

For this project you will count the number of pockets on the clothes your family are wearing on two different days of the week.

Requirements:

- Draw a picture of each family member.
- Count and record the number of pockets on each family member's clothing.
- Repeat your family pocket count on a different day of the week.
- Record your data on a 3 column chart. Write each family member's name and the number of pockets you counted on their clothing.

Name	Number of Pockets on _____	Number of Pocket on _____

- Write 3, or more, facts about your data. For example,
 - Who had the most pockets on day one/day two?
 - Who had the least pockets on day one/day two?
 - How many pockets did you count in all on day one/ day two?
 - Did you count more pockets in all on the first or second day?
How many more?

Bring your project to school to share on: _____

Julie's Request

Julie loved the Thanksgiving holiday because it triggered the little sprinkle of holiday spirit she developed every year that grew and grew until she almost burst with excitement on Christmas Eve. So although Julie did enjoy turkey and mashed potatoes, while she ate Thanksgiving dinner her mind couldn't help wandering into a winter wonderland of holiday magic.

As soon as the last piece of pumpkin pie was served, Julie looked over at her mom and decided it was okay to ask...

"After we clean up the dinner dishes, how about getting the Christmas tree out of the attic and setting it up?" Julie asked. The expression on her mom's face didn't look too promising, so she glanced at her father, who was savoring his last bite of pie.

"Julie, I know it's tough to wait to decorate for the holidays, but you must realize that your mother and I have been up since dawn cooking, cleaning, and getting ready for company. I just really need to put my feet up and digest the delicious Thanksgiving dinner we just finished," Dad replied.

"I know you've been very busy, and thank you again for the delicious Thanksgiving meal. I think, though, that all you would have to do is get the box from the attic and set up the main tree trunk Jessica, Ricky, and I know how to put together all of the branches, and the ornament boxes aren't too heavy for us to carry down either. PLEASE, DAD!"

Julie's mom and dad looked at each other, but Julie couldn't tell what they were thinking. She decided it would be good luck if she repeated a silent chant in her head. "Please say yes! Please say yes!" started playing in her head like a familiar song.

Mom wanted the children to have fun the rest of the day, but she couldn't help remembering a similar request and promise last year on Thanksgiving. Thanksgiving evening had come to an end when Jessica fell asleep with a branch in her hand, the dog ran off with yet another branch to bury in couch cushions in another room, and Julie kept working hard, but ended up with a pile of useless branches and a disturbingly bare Christmas tree. Making these kind of decisions was not an easy task.

Julie waited as patiently as she could, still repeating her silent chant ...

true, false, or don't know
1)	1) Julie's family stored the Christmas tree in the basement.
2)	2) When Mom remembered how easily the kids had put the Christmas tree up last year, she agreed that it would be okay this year.
3)	3) The Christmas tree was eight feet tall.
4)	4) Dad felt too tired to put up the Christmas tree.
5)	5) Mom and Dad had a hard time deciding if they should let the children put up the Christmas tree.
6)	6) Julie thought that her mom was getting ready to say "no" to putting up the Christmas tree, so she asked her dad before her mom answered.
