SOCIAL STUDIES SHOWCASE

Model UN Update

Warren Central took a team of 20 students to participate in the annual Model United Nations at the University of Chicago (MUNUC) competition in February. While the majority of students represented the Netherlands, a few students represented specific people in specialized agencies. For example, Lillian Hough represented Prince Reuss-Greiz in a 1871 German Unification summit and Keaun Brown represented Senator Tom Cotton in a US Senate session regarding criminal justice reform.

All of the students did outstanding work, as they not only participated but facilitated debate while also contributing to resolution papers and amendments. The entire team did impressive and amazing work! Mr. Salemi, teacher sponsor said, "I am extremely proud of how many of them overcame their personal fears of speaking in front of large groups. It is not an easy task to get up in front of a hundred or more strangers and speak authoritatively on global issues, but each and every student did just that." (Please see pictures below.)
