“Looking back, moving forward”

Program to commemorate 50th anniversary of Prince Edward school closing

PE graduates from six decades will discuss 50 years of progress

The Prince Edward County Schools will commemorate the 50th anniversary of the 1959 closing of the county's public schools with a panel discussion program. The event will take place at 6 p.m. Friday, May 22, in the Prince Edward County High School auditorium. It is open to the public.

The six panelists are Prince Edward graduates, from the 1950s to the 21st century. Under the topic “Looking back; moving forward,” the panel will address from their own perspectives both the school division's history, when during the era of Massive Resistance the county chose to close its public schools rather than desegregate, and its progress over the past 50 years.

Mr. Ralph W. Baker, this year's graduation speaker and a 1985 Prince Edward graduate, will serve as moderator.

Members of the panel are James A. Epps, Everett Berryman Jr., Angeles W. Christian, Eric Vaughan, Edgar d. Jones and Megan Clark.

Mr. James A. Epps graduated from R. R. Moton High School in the Class of 1957. The son of Lazarus and Helen Epps, he had returned to Prince Edward with his mother to attend school. After graduation he held many jobs and finally settled on a career as a firefighter in the Baltimore County Fire Department. He retired in 1999 after 32 years of service.
