Frequently Asked Questions

I think my child needs special education. How do I get him/her tested?

First, we ask that if you haven't discussed your concerns with your child's teacher and/or school principal take that step first. This way, school personnel can address your concerns and if needed provide your student with intervention/strategies based on your student's individual needs to remediate academic and/or behavioral issues.

If these interventions/strategies are not successful, the intervention team will usually recommend the student for a special education evaluation. However, if you suspect your student does have a disability that would qualify him/her for special education services, please forward a written request to your child's school principal requesting your child be evaluated for special education services.
