Writing a Life Long Learning Paper (LLL)

A Life Long Learning Paper is a narrative, which includes information about a real life learning experience. This could be a field trip with the school, a volunteer experience, or a unique life experience. Talk to your advisor for more ideas. The bottom line is it should be something you learned from, and you should be able to state clearly what new information you learned.

You can follow this outline, or use these as guiding questions:

I. Where and when did the activity take place?
   a. What occurred during the activity?
   b. How did you get there or hear about the opportunity?
   c. Who did you participate in the activity with?

II. What did you learn during this activity?
    (This is the most important part of a LLL paper!)
    a. What new skills did you learn?
    b. What new facts did you learn?

III. Would you participate in a similar experience in the future?
    a. Would you recommend it to students?
    b. Why or why not?
    c. What would you do differently next time?

This should be a ¾ page (minimum) reflection, 12 point font, max double spaced.

Each LLL is eligible for .1 credits, and you may turn in up to 10 of them in a school year.
