Welcome to the school year 2019/20

It's the start of another school year, can you believe it? It's amazing how quickly time goes by. It seems so weird to me to have moose season starting before school starts. I hope you all were able to get plenty of berries and fish before the start of the school year, since the rain is keeping me from getting all the berries I'd like to have in my freezer.

I'm looking forward to another exciting year in Grayling. Hopefully we'll have fun enjoying another culture camp together in the woods. It's always fun to spend the time with the students and their families outside of the school atmosphere. It's also a great time with the Elders – during the school year, it's just hard to get that quality time with them.

There are many exciting and new things happening at the school this year. Hopefully you have already talked with the teachers to hear what is going on in the classrooms. I also hope you have met our new teacher, James "Cannon" Hubka.

Some of the changes in the middle/high school are that we are tightening up the policy for using electronic devices in the classroom. Electronic devices are voluntarily collected from students at the beginning of class. If a student does not turn in their phone and uses it during class, it will be taken away from the student for the rest of the day. So parents, if you are texting your child during the school day, please don't expect a response while they are in class.

Another change is that all students have been provided with school headphones. In my class, students are expected to use them to listen to the Acellus videos that show them how to do their math lessons.

Middle school science will be dissecting this year. Thanks to DonorsChoose.org, I was able to obtain several animal specimens for them to dissect. This year, we are focusing on life science and plan to do many hands-on activities.

For the high schoolers, please make sure they are keeping up on their homework assignments. Most of my classes do have some homework. If they don't do their assignments, they will most likely not be able to receive a passing grade or credit for that class.
