Athletics Director

It is our pleasure to welcome you, the fans, to our 2006 - 2007 Winter Sports Season.

Although the athletes are members of opposing teams, they are friendly rivals. Their participation in the game reflects the essence of interscholastic athletics – to play hard but fair.

We encourage you, as fans and spectators, to demonstrate good sportsmanship and cooperation to ensure continued success this year and in years ahead.

Please support the advertisers in this program. Without their help these programs would not be possible.

Thank you for your support of high school winter sports.

BASKETBALL

Basketball is perhaps America's favorite sport, both to watch and to play. Millions of Americans, from grade school on up, in gymnasiums and parks, participate in or follow the sport.

Unlike most modern sports, basketball is not a game that evolved from sports played for centuries or from the sports of ancient civilizations. Basketball was deliberately invented by a young coach, James Naismith, whose assignment it was to develop an orderly game that could be played indoors and that would hold the interest of players during the long winters between the football and baseball seasons.

In 1891, Naismith, a Canadian seminary student on leave from the seminary, worked as an instructor at the YMCA school in Springfield, Massachusetts. While there, Naismith was asked to design a game that would meet the requirements just mentioned. He decided early on that a ball was necessary. Because the game would be played indoors, however, the ball should be moved by the hands rather than with a racket or bat. Naismith came up with the idea of a raised goal. On the day the game was to be tested, no cartons were available, so peach baskets were used.

Naismith outlined 13 original rules, and the first basketball game was played December 21, 1891, between two teams of nine players each. The game, quickly dubbed "basketball," was an immediate success. It spread across the United States through the YMCA network. Although colleges soon adopted the game, records indicate that there was little intercollegiate play at the time.

A new goal was introduced, which allowed the ball to drop through a net of chain rope, making it unnecessary for players to retrieve the ball after each goal. To prevent interference by overzealous fans, backboards were added in 1895, an innovation that unexpectedly brought the ricochet goal to the game. Until 1900, four different versions were played. Eventually basketball as we know it today emerged, with five players on a team and restrictions on dribbling.
