NEWS FROM THE NURSE

We need your help to reduce the spread of germs! By working together and taking precautions, we can help minimize the impact of any illness that can be spread to others.

- Wash hands often with soap and water for 20 seconds;
- Avoid touching eyes, nose, and mouth with unwashed hands;
- Avoid kissing, hugging, and sharing cups or eating utensils with people who are sick;
- Disinfect frequently touched surfaces, such as toys and doorknobs, especially if someone is sick;
- Stay home when feeling sick and obtain consultation from your health care provider.
  - Keep sick children at home for at least 24 hours after they no longer have vomiting or diarrhea
  - Ill children should stay home until 24 hours after they are fever free without the use of fever-reducing medicines
- Cover your cough/sneeze. It is best to cough or sneeze into your upper sleeve or elbow, not your hands. If you cough/sneeze in your hands or in a tissue, make sure you wash your hands afterwards.

These everyday steps are a good way to reduce your chances of getting the flu. However, a yearly flu vaccine is the best protection against flu illness.

For additional information on the flu or ways to reduce the spread of contagious illnesses please visit the following websites:

Bailey Gause, Mid-Carolina High School - Artist

It is a pleasure for teacher educators to create valuable learning experiences for students.
Mission of the SCATE 2019 Program Cover Design Contest
Thank you to the Bailey Gause for choosing her artwork submitted!

My name is Bailey Gause. I'm in 11th grade at Mid-Carolina High School. I am currently in Art 3. My drawing is based on the idea that teachers "plant the seeds for the next generation" so to speak. I thought the apple seed was appropriate because the mission of SCATE is educating the next generation of teachers. My future goals are to go to college for wildlife rehabilitation, teaching, and then maybe elementary school so that I can care for our wildlife as well as household pets.

Art Teacher: Mrs. Colleen Mahan

SCATE Program Cover Contest Coordinator: Dr. Lucille Elder

Contest Participants:

John Capps, Jolene Vickers, Daphne Frazier, Rosanna Johnson, Tanya Carter

Thank you to all who participated.

Several MCHS art students had artwork on display in the Cantey Building-student art exhibit at the SC State Fair this year.

Congratulations to Jacob Bedenbaugh for winning first place and Ashlyn Howe for winning an Honorable Mention ribbon in this year's SC State Fair Art Competition!

High School

Working Together for Lifelong Success

Short Clips

Safety first
Your teenager may want to make plans without having to clear them with you first. But to keep her safe, you still need to know where she's going and who she'll be with. Insist on details, and give her a curfew. She may scoff, but deep down she'll know you love her.

Kindness is easy
Being kind in small ways shows others that you care—and it's simple. Encourage your high schooler to exhibit kindness throughout the day. For instance, he could carry the lunch tray for a classmate on crutches. Or he might give a quarter to a cashier if the person in front of him comes up short.

Dangers of vaping
Although e-cigarettes, or "vapes," may be marketed as a safer way to smoke, they're not. Vaping is simply a different way to put nicotine into the bloodstream. It's addictive—and it's illegal for anyone under 18 years old. Let your teen know these facts, especially if you suspect that her friends might be vaping.

Worth quelling
"The things that make me different are the things that make me me."
—A.A. Milne

Just for fun
Q: Why did the computer cross the road?
A: Because it was programmed by the chicken!

Time to talk

Fifteen minutes may not seem like much. But research shows spending that amount of time each day talking with your teen can keep your lines of communication open. Try these four ways to make the minutes count.

1. Chat with your teenager when he's relaxed and in a good mood.
Knock on his door before he goes to bed, or greet him when he comes home from an evening out with friends. Start a conversation about your night and his, rather than asking him a lot of questions.

2. Watch for cues that your teen wants to talk. If he has something on his mind—or just feels like talking—he may linger nearby while you cook or offer to go along to the grocery store with you. Encourage him to open up by casually asking how things are going.

3. Do an activity together. Your high schooler may feel more comfortable discussing his life while you're asking a walk or driving to the mall. Be ready to listen extra closely if he mentions a serious topic like a new relationship or a friend who is in trouble.

4. Reconnect after interruptions. If you have to stop a conversation to take a younger child to soccer practice, for instance, let your teen know you still want to talk. ("I'll be back in 30 minutes. Can we talk more then?") Be sure to follow through when you get home.

I wouldn't miss it!

Teens who attend school regularly are more likely to graduate. Good attendance also creates a habit that can carry over into work later. Consider these tips.

Set expectations
Being out for even a day or two a month means losing valuable learning time. Tell your child that the only acceptable excuses are illness, family emergencies, or pre-approved college visits.

Discuss results
Point out that missing school means she'll have to make up coursework. If she falls far behind, she may have to retake courses.

Note: Call the attendance line or write notes for excused absences so the school knows your teen is not skipping. If she does skip, contact her school counselor so you can create a plan together to get her back on track.

The opioid epidemic and teenagers

You may have heard news reports about the opioid epidemic and wondered whether it could affect your teenager. Here are answers to questions about opioids, which include heroin and prescription pain relievers like OxyContin, Vicodin, and codeine.

Q: How can I talk to my teen about opioids?

A: Explain the dangers, including such serious consequences as addiction and even fatal overdose. When you hear sobering statistics in the news like the number of overdoses in your state, share them with your high schooler.

I do if I think my child has tried these drugs.

A: Signs of opioid use include shifts in relationships with family and friends, not caring about one's appearance, changes in sleep habits, and poor concentration. If you suspect or discover your teen is using drugs, contact her pediatrician immediately.

Q: What are the signs of opioid use, and what should I do?

A: Keep all medications locked up between doses. Also, promptly dispose of any leftovers. That will keep them away from teens who are tempted to explore medicine cabinets or face peer pressure from friends to do so.

Does multitasking work?

My son regularly scammed Twitter and texted his friends while doing homework. James told me not to worry—that he could "multitask"—but I wasn't so sure.

I asked his homework teacher about this last spring, and she said kids tend to make more mistakes and take longer to finish work when they multitask. To show my son the difference, she suggested this. I asked him to track how long it took him to do homework for a week and the number of errors marked when the work was returned. Then, he tracked the same things for a week of homework without tweeting and texting.

He was surprised by the results! Once James saw he could finish more quickly and do better work, he decided on his own to cut down on multitasking—giving him more time for socializing afterward.

How to increase confidence

Feeling confident can pave the way for your high schooler's future success, both in and out of the classroom. Use these suggestions to boost her self-esteem.

Stay upbeat. Encourage your teen with positive statements like "I know you'll rock your presentation today!" Also, share what gives you confidence. "I was a little nervous about my presentation at work, but I felt good because I had backed up my points with solid information."

Focus on what your teen can do. Shine the spotlight on what your child is good at. Say she has a knack for explaining complicated ideas in simple language. Ask her to help her younger brother with his fractions homework or to teach the whole family how to play a challenging board game.

Give her responsibility. Put your teenager in charge of home projects like replacing a water filter or
