

Helping your teen become a safer driver.

Every year, nearly 6,000 teenagers are killed in car crashes and about 300,000 are injured. Despite safer cars, better roads and countless driving programs, the numbers have stayed fairly constant for more than a decade. But you can help change this.

get the conversation started.

Talking to your teen about the rules of the road isn't necessarily easy, but it is important. Especially when you consider that three out of four teens say their parents would be the best influence in getting them to drive more safely.

As a way to get started, Allstate has created the Parent-Teen Driving Contract. It can help you:

- Outline your teen's key driving responsibilities
- Decide on the consequences associated when those responsibilities aren't met
- Define your role in helping your teen succeed

Once you talk over each issue and come to an agreement, fill out the rules and consequences in the space provided. Then sign and date it. Be sure to keep it in a prominent place, like the front of your refrigerator, so you can re-examine it often and make changes as your teen becomes a more experienced driver.
