Landmarks

Chicago, Illinois is the biggest city in the Midwest. Willis Tower, the country's tallest building, is in Chicago. Chicago is an important center for business, manufacturing, and transportation because of its location near waterways. Chicago has always been a transportation hub, or a center for moving goods and people. Railroads, highways, airports, rivers, and lakes move more people and goods into and out of Chicago than any other city. Chicago's O'Hare International Airport is one of the United State's busiest airports. About 200,000 people pass through O'Hare each day. That adds up to 73 million airplane passengers a year. O'Hare International Airport employs 50,000 workers.

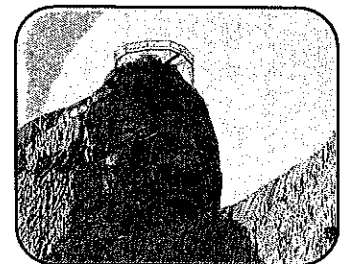

Minnesota's Mall of America is the largest indoor shopping mall in the United States. The Mall of America has more than 520 stores. If you spent just ten minutes in each store, it would take you four days and three nights to visit all of them. The Mall of America also has 50 restaurants, 14 movie theaters, and an amusement park.

Saint Louis, Missouri is called the "Gateway to the West." Pioneers started their journey by heading west from Saint Louis. The Gateway Arch in Saint Louis was built to honor those pioneers. Made of gleaming stainless steel, the arch rises about 630 feet above the Mississippi River. Visitors can ride a tram to the top.

Two huge monuments are carved into the Black Hills of South Dakota. The first is Mount Rushmore National Monument. It shows the faces of four American presidents: George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, Theodore Roosevelt, and Abraham Lincoln. Each head is 60 feet tall.

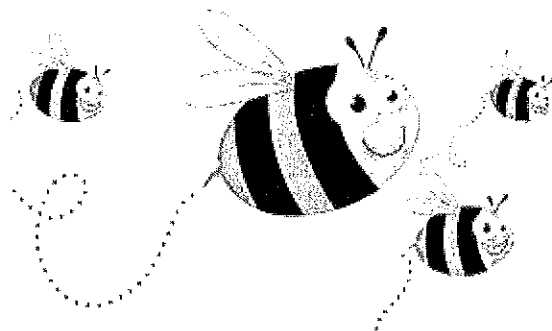

The second monument honors a Lakota Indian chief named Crazy Horse. Crazy Horse was a Native American leader of the Lakota tribe. The face is 87 feet tall. It is still being carved into the Black Hills. When it is finished, Crazy Horse Memorial will be the world's largest statue, 563 feet tall.
