"The Easter Egg" by Jan
Brett

Wed. & Thurs.

Characters:

Narrator 1	Flora Bunny
Narrator 2	Buster Birch
Narrator 3	Aunt Sassyfrass
Hoppi	Granny Ireney
Easter Rabbit	Hans Vanderabbit
Mother Robin	Roberto

Narrator 1: One fine morning in Rabbit Town, Mother Robin was spreading some news.

Mother Robin: Cheer-rup! Cheer-rup! Spring is here!

Narrator 2: A very young rabbit named Hoppi heard the news and his heart began to race.

Hoppi: Oh boy! It's time to start working on my very first Easter egg.

Narrator 3: Hoppi wished with all his might that he could make the best egg of the year and help the Easter Rabbit hide
the eggs on Easter morning.

Hoppi: Now all I need is an amazing idea for my egg!

Narrator 1: So Hoppi set out for a walk to think over his plans.

Narrator 2: Soon Hoppi spotted Flora Bunny planting wildflowers in eggs and he picked some for himself.

Hoppi: Good morning, Flora! The Easter Rabbit will love your colorful flowers.

Flora: Thank you, Hoppi! Here, take this basket for your flowers.

Narrator 2: So Hoppi hopped on until he heard a chop, scrape sound coming from Buster Birch's home.

Hoppi: You sure are carving a magnificent wooden egg, Buster!

Buster: Well, thank you, and here's a smooth round piece of wood just for you.

Narrator 3: Hoppi picked up his basket of wood and flowers and hopped on.

Narrator 1: Suddenly, the smell of sweetness led him out of the woods.

Aunt Sassyfrass: Hello, Hoppi! How are you today?

Hoppi: Hello, Aunt Sassyfrass! I should have known that sweet smell could only be your fine chocolate eggs.

Narrator 2: Hoppi hopped very high and exclaimed. . .

Hoppi: Hippety-hop! I'll make a chocolate egg so sweet the Easter Rabbit's whiskers will tingle.

Narrator 3: Hoppi hopped on down the path and saw Granny Ireney decorating her story eggs.

Hoppi: Wow! I'll never make an egg that beautiful.

Granny Ireney: You should try, Hoppi. Here take one of these special tools and practice.

Narrator 1: Hoppi added the tool to his basket and hopped on until he spotted an extraordinary egg.

Hoppi: Hello, Hans Vanderabbit, your painting is fantastic! The Easter Rabbit almost looks real!

Hans Vanderabbit: Thank you, Hoppi! Here take these paints and brush. You should try painting your egg, too.

Narrator 2: So, Hoppi bounced farther along until a loud boing nearly knocked him down.

Hoppi: Whoa! Roberto, you have made an unusual egg!

Roberto: I'm glad you like my mechanical egg. Would you like to make one?

Hoppi: Thank you, Roberto, but I should make the egg that is right for me.

Narrator 3: Hoppi hopped back to the woods and lay down to think about how to make an egg he could be proud of.

Narrator 1: Suddenly Mother Robin was swooping and calling wildly.

Mother Robin: Help! Help! Someone please help me! One of my eggs has fallen out of my nest!

Hoppi: Oh, you poor thing! I'll take care of you the best I can.

Narrator 2: Hoppi carefully covered the egg with his soft, warm fur and there he stayed.

Narrator 3: He watched over the egg through rain, cold, and dark nights.

Narrator 1: Even when he heard wild animals and strange noises, he didn't run away.

Narrator 2: Finally, the time came for the rabbits to present their eggs to the Easter Rabbit.

Narrator 3: A beautiful wagon came toward them. The Easter Rabbit had arrived at last!

Easter Rabbit: Oh my! You have brought me the most beautiful eggs in the world. But a very special one is not here. Fill my wagon with your eggs. When I return, I will show it to you.

Narrator 1: The Easter Rabbit left the other rabbits feeling very confused. He disappeared into the woods.

Narrator 2: The Easter Rabbit returned with Hoppi.

Easter Rabbit: Hoppi has an amazing egg. He kept Mother Robin's egg warm and safe until it hatched.

Narrator 3: The Easter Rabbit placed the empty blue shell on top of the other eggs in his wagon.

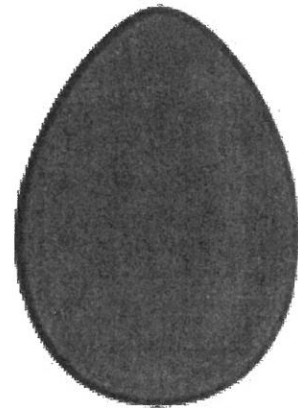

ALL: Hooray for Hoppi! It's our best Easter ever!

Narrator 1: Then the Easter Rabbit and Hoppi rode off in the wagon together to hide eggs for Easter morning.
