

PARENT ADVISORY MEETING Where is the School System when it comes to partnering with Families?

At our first Parent Advisory Committee Meeting we discussed several topics and we learned so much from our parents that attended!!! It became clear we need to go deeper on just one topic at a time so there is time for rich discussion and learning.

We really want a true partnership between family and school as that helps students reach high levels of social and academic learning.

The first thing we discussed was the need to look at how we are engaging in Family-School partnerships as a school system. We used a rubric to help guide the discussion.

The rubric comes from the book listed on the right-hand side titled, "Beyond the Bake Sale. The Essential Guide to Family-School Partnership."

THE RUBRIC WE USED

Open-Door School

Partnership School

4 Versions of Family-School Partnerships

Check the boxes that have the most statements under them marked or circled. Check only 1 box in each row

Come-If-We-Call School

All families & communities have something great to offer—we do whatever it takes to work closely together to make sure every single student succeeds.	Parents can be involved at our school in many ways— we're working hard to get an even bigger turnout for our activities. When we ask the community to help, people often respond.	Parents are welcome when we ask them, but there's only so much they can offer. The most important thing they can do is help their kids at home. We know where to get community help if we need it.	Parents belong at home, not at school. If students don't do well, it's because their families don't give them enough support. We're already doing all we can. Our school is an oasis in a troubled community. We want to keep it that way.
Building Relationships     Family center is always open, full of interesting materials to borrow     Home visits are made to every new family     Activities honor families' contributions     Building is open to community use & social services are available to families	Building Relationships     Teachers contact families once a year     Parent coordinator is available if families have questions or need help     Office staff are friendly     Staff contact community agencies & organizations when help is needed	Building Relationships     Better-educated parents are more involved     "Many immigrant parents don't have time to come or contribute"     Staff are very selective about who comes into the school	Building Relationships Families do not "bother" school staff "Minority families don't value education" Parents need security clearance to come in It is important to keep community influences out of the school
Linking to Learning     All family activities connect to what students are learning     Parents & teachers look at student work & test results together     Community groups offer tutoring & homework programs at the school     Students' work goes home every week, with a scoring guide	□ Linking to Learning ■ Teachers explain test scores if asked ■ Folders of student work go home occasionally ■ School holds curriculum nights 3 or 4 times a year ■ Staff let families know about out-of-school classes in the community	Linking to Learning     Parents are told what students will be learning at the fall open house     Parents can call the office to get teacher-recorded messages about homework     Workshops are offered on parenting	Linking to Learning Curriculum & standards are considered too complex for parents to understand If parents want more information, they can ask for it We're teachers, not social workers"
□ Addressing Differences • Translators are readily available • Teachers use books & materials about families' cultures • PTA/PTO includes all families • Local groups help staff reach families	□ Addressing Differences  • Office staff will find a translator if parents ask in advance  • Multicultural nights are held once a year  • "Minority" parents have their own group	Addressing Differences "We can't deal with 20 different languages" "Parents can bring a translator with them" "This school just isn't the same as it used to be"	□ Addressing Differences  • "Those parents need to learn English"  • "We teach about our country—that's what those parents need to know"  • "This neighborhood is going downhill"
Supporting Advocacy     There is a clear, open process for resolving problems     Teachers contact families each month to discuss student progress     Student-led parent-teacher conferences are held 3 times a year for 30 minutes	Supporting Advocacy Principal will meet with parents to discuss a problem Regular progress reports go to parents, but test data can be hard to understand Parent-teacher conferences are held twice a year	Supporting Advocacy School calls families when children have problems Families visit school on report card pick up day & can see a teacher if they call first	Supporting Advocacy Parents don't come to conferences Problems are dealt with by the professional staff Teachers don't feel safe with parents
■ Sharing Power  Parents & teachers research issues such as prejudice & tracking  Parent group is focused on improving student achievement  Families are involved in all major decisions  Parents can use the school's phone, copier, fax, & computers  Staff work with local organizers to improve the school & the neighborhood	□ Sharing Power  • Parents can raise issues at PTA/PTO meetings or see the principal  • Parent group sets its own agenda & raises money for the school  • Resource center for low-income families is housed in a portable classroom next to the school  • PTA/PTO officers can use the school office  • A community representative sits on the school council	Sharing Power Principal sets agenda for parent meetings PTA/PTO gets the school's message out "Parents are not experts in education" Community groups can address the school board if they have concerns	Sharing Power Principal picks a small group of "cooperative parents" to help out Families are afraid to complain. "They might take it out on my kid" "Community groups should mind their own business; they don't know about education."

from "Beyond the Bake Sale—The Essential Guide to Family-School Partnerships" (2007) by Henderson, Mapp, Johnson & Davies

Fortress School

Groups of parents and educators read through the rubric and discussed how they marked the rubric as to if our schools are Partnership Schools, Open-Door Schools, Come-If-We-Call Schools, or Fortress Schools.

What we learned was that we different people have different experiences so we could not come to one conclusion as to which type of school we are in. So that tells us we have room for improvement in the area of family-school partnerships. We need a strong vision of what Family-School Partnerships are and plan because when families and schools have strong partnerships students reach high levels of social and academic learning.

We also discussed what we are doing well, what we could do better, and what is driving the need for schools to change. We didn't get to spend a ton of time on Solutions and Priorities but we opened the door to start looking at things more deeply.

Our next meeting is set for March 8th starting from 6:00 - 7:30. We will share our Achievement and Integration Plan and put together a sub-committee to start building a vision, mission, and core values for strong Family-School Partnerships.