A Dog's Purpose
Movie Review
By: Klarissa S.

This movie is rated PG, but it is a wonderful movie. This movie was released in January. The main actor is a dog voiced by Josh Gad. The basic plot of the movie is that a dog is reincarnated several times so the dog can help people in need. The cons of this movie is that there is kissing and a little bit of violence and some bad language. Most reviews are positive. The movie has a 84% approval rating.

Biodigital Human App Review by: Emily S.

Biodigital Human is an app by Google Chrome. It is also free and recommended for ages 13+. You can choose from 1000 interactive visualizations to build your own custom library models. There is also a search bar that you can search anything. The Biodigital Human is a 3D app that simplifies the understanding of anatomy, diseases, and treatment. You can even explore the body in 3D. The Biodigital Human has free editing tools. It is even a better way to understand the human body. There are some drawbacks though, like it's not recommended for younger kids if they're immature. One more drawback is that it costs money for higher levels and parts if you want them.

Kids should be able to bring blankets to school

Editorial By: Damian H. and Lance T.

We think that kids should be able to bring blankets to school. First we think that because kids might get better grades if they are comfortable and that's always good. Second also if they are cold they might not have jackets and they would be cold, and if they brought blankets they wouldn't be cold and if they aren't cold then they will get better grades. Last because if they are stressed on a test they can relax thanks to a soft blanket and again they get better grades. One downside is people could cover their faces and post a threat and no one would know who did it, but if that ever happens then blankets will be banned again. That is why I think blankets should be allowed in school.
