YOUR NEEDS. OUR MISSION.

Community Conversations on Health is a partnership between Texas A&M AgriLife Extension and the Texas Department of State Health Services (DSHS) that aims to authentically engage and build sustaining relationships with rural and faith-based communities disproportionately impacted by health concerns of infectious and chronic diseases in ways that lead to improved health.

THE WELL CHURCH INITIATIVE

In support, we have also joined with our own Well Church Initiative, who provide information and resources for clergy, rural churches, and faith-based organizations who are serving the health and wellness needs of their congregations and surrounding communities.

OUR APPROACH

Simply put, our goal is to give a voice to rural and faith-based communities to ask questions, share concerns, and request health information and resources that you believe will help you make better informed decisions toward optimal health and well-being.

VOICE

- ▶ Provide a simple method for rural and faith-based communities to share their concerns, questions, and needs for health information and resources
- ▶ Develop information and resources in response to those concerns, questions, and needs

CHOICE

- ▶ Provide access to health resources, so you can better make decisions regarding your own health
- ▶ Support personal choice in decision making, without pressure
- ▶ Respect personal values and beliefs

NEXT STEPS

SHARE WITH US!

We want to hear from you. Share with us your questions, needs, and/or concerns related to adopting a healthy lifestyle, COVID-19, flu, and chronic disease through an anonymous form. We will use these questions to guide what resources are provided for you, your families, and your communities.
