5:02	Kelso School District Board Work Session Every day, within the operational side of all organizations, hundreds of “things” happen. People are hired, trained, evaluated, disciplined, rewarded, and fired; money is budgeted, invested, and spent; buildings are constructed, renovated, used, and maintained; customers and clients are related to, sometimes appropriately, sometimes not; operational strategies intended to produce desired results are planned and implemented. All boards have concerns about these things. And every board has an obligation.....to assure the organization operates soundly and within the board’s own values. But while the Board’s concern about operational decision making is proper and necessary, the way the Board goes about exercising reasonable and appropriate diligence is where things normally go wrong.  Quinn, R &amp; Dawson, L.; Good Governance is A Choice, p. 41-42
