The National Panel of New Principals

Principals in their first or second year are invited to be part of a unique professional development opportunity, which gathers and shares insights from hundreds of their peers across the country.

Now in its fourth year, the Panel is growing in prestige and influence, and has become a trusted, one-of-a-kind information source that connects new principals with each other, and informs the thinking of key legislators and education policy makers. Panelists participate in 3-5 online surveys of 10 minutes or less. In return, they receive the results and best ideas from their peers, along with special opportunities throughout the year such as virtual book talks with national experts. This year's first survey has just been completed (see results in the latest Rise & Shine).

There's still time for new elementary and middle-level principals to join in this year's cohort. Remember, it's totally free, has a very small time commitment, and NAESP membership is not required. We want to make sure your state is well-represented so please reach out to your district and local educational leadership with this invitation, and send your new principals to <http://www.newprincipal.org/>
