My why: Learners and educators make a difference in each other's lives every day! I am blessed to be a part of this wonderful journey.

Leifa Samuelson- ELA Educator-Level 7-Leila went to Duluth Denfeld High School and is graduating from Concordia College in Moorhead with a major in elementary education and a minor in psychology. Her hobbies include being with family and friends, being outdoors (especially the lake!), shopping, and reading.

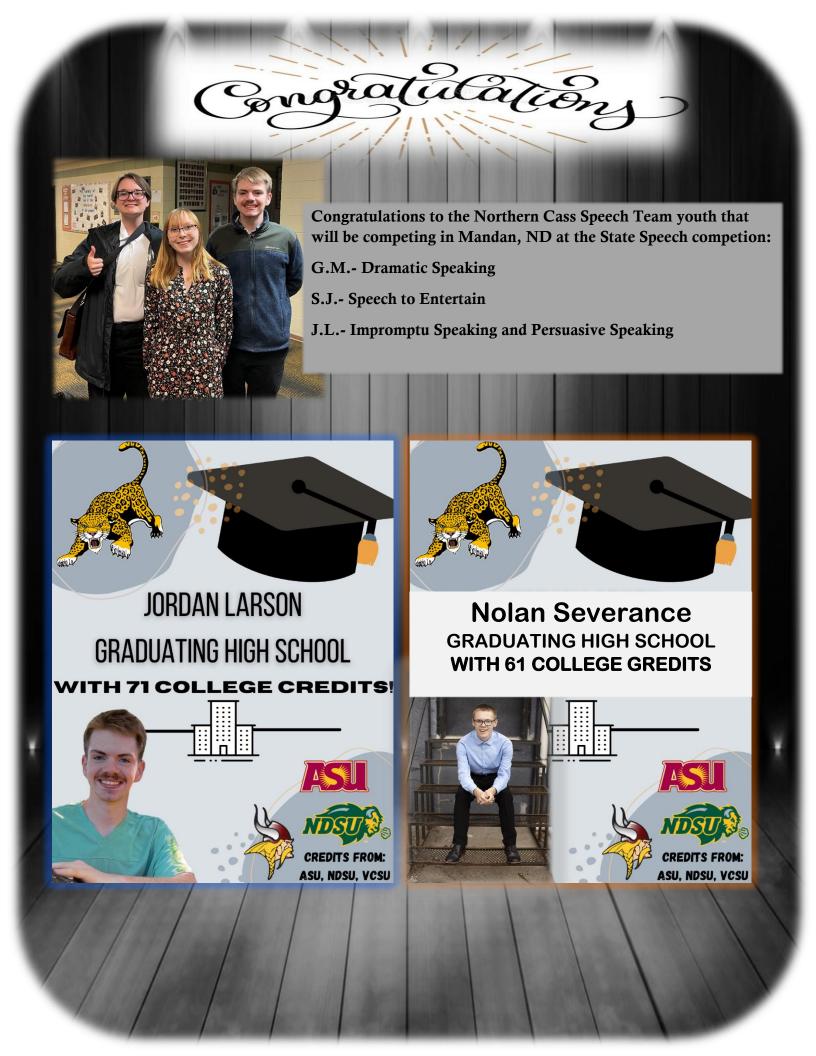

Elle Larson-Kindergarten Educator- I am originally from Hunter, North Dakota and graduated from Northern Cass in 2019. I attended the University of North Dakota to obtain a double major in Early Childhood and Elementary Education with a Minor in Special Education. During my time at UND I was also involved in my sorority, Gamma Phi Beta. I enjoy traveling, going to the lake, spending time with family, friends and my significant other. I am looking forward to coming "home" to Northern Cass and teaching Kindergarten!

Kiley Kolnes-Para Educator-I live in Harwood with my husband Jeff and 2 sons, Ethan (9) and Colton (4). I grew up in Ada, MN on a farm with my parents and 5 siblings. I have a Business Management degree and I have been doing daycare for 10 years to stay home with my boys. Now that they will both be in school fulltime, it was time for a change. When I'm not running kids to activities or cooking for them, I enjoy a DIY project (like refinishing furniture) or going on a fun family adventure.

Jenny Evenson- Para Educator- I live in Arthur with my husband, Matt, and our two daughters, Lily (5th) and Sadie (PreK). For the past 10 years I have been a licensed home childcare provider and I am excited to be able to continue to work with learners in my new role as a Para! My family and I love to go camping in the summer. We also enjoy going to rodeos and own a bucking bull named "Delivery Man" that we enter into various events across the country! We are both from South Dakota, so we spend as much time visiting family there as we can.

April 2023

Thank you to everyone who participated in the town hall listening sessions and provided feedback for the proposed Northern Cass Health and Wellness Center. The Northern Cass Health and Wellness Center Task Force, which led these sessions, has wrapped up and an Advisory Group has been meeting to move this work forward and ensure this is, first and foremost, a community project. Here are a few updates on the project:

- Essentia Health has pledged funding and will partner with Northern Cass to build a medical clinic on the school grounds.
- Essentia Health has designed the medical clinic and architects are working on a draft plan for the entire wellness center building which will include the medical clinic footprint.
 The cost of the project has been identified and 'drawings' will be completed by Friday, April 28th which will be shared with the public soon.
- A nonprofit will be formed to oversee the center, the Board of which will make guiding decisions on the project. The Board will be composed of community members, Northern Cass school board members, an Essentia Health representative, a school staff representative, and local business representatives. We have a majority of the Board identified and will finalize this in the next two weeks.
- Several initial funders have been identified and a fundraising campaign plan is being organized. The fundraising campaign will officially begin on July 1st.
- The school team has been working on grants for programs and services in the center. If awarded, we will communicate that through the school's social media, weekly memo and the Community Center Task Force Facebook page.

You may have noticed quite a few lines to the effect of "more information to come." This is a large, wonderful and very complex undertaking which includes many voices. The goal is that while working within an ambitious timeline, we still make sure to take the time needed to incorporate as much community input as possible. Not every recommendation will make it into the final plan but please know this project is meant for everyone and all input is being taken into serious consideration.

When the advisory group goes out to talk to potential partners and investors, they are presenting the collective dream of vibrant and thriving communities we call home. We envision a Northern Cass Health and Wellness Center as a place of welcoming where all community members have easy access to healthcare, learning and a sense of community. Please look for more details and updates over the summer. Thank you for being a part of this big, bold dream!

If you have questions, please reach out to Dr. Steiner, Paige Carlson or Amber Lockhart.

Can Students Productively Use AI in Writing?

By Jordan Larson

Since the rise of ChatGPT, AI has been at the forefront of the education discussion more than ever. Its ability to craft essays (albeit simple ones) is unheard of. Students can use AI productively to learn how to be a better writer, but the line between harmful and helpful usage is thin.

Students can use AI to accelerate the first draft process. As reported by The Register, Scott Graham, an associate professor at the Department of Rhetoric and Writing at the University of Texas at Austin, says, "Some students have a lot of trouble sometimes generating that first draft. If all the effort goes into getting them to generate that first draft, and then they hit the deadline, that is what they will submit. They do not get a chance to revise, they do not get a chance to edit. If we can use those systems to speed write the first draft, it might really be helpful." Arguably, most of the creative process in writing occurs in the revision process, where students need to weigh the multitudes of connections among their topics to decide the best way to communicate their ideas. Admittedly, creativity plays a large part in the brainstorming process as well. That's why Anna Mills, who educates students on how to write at a community college in the Bay Area, thinks the following: "It's too tempting to use [AI] as a crutch, skip the thinking, and skip the frustrating moments of writing. Some of that is part of the process of going deeper and wrestling with ideas. There is a risk of learning loss if students become dependent and do not develop the writing skills they need." In review, there is a balance between using AI too much in the brainstorming process (and losing out on the arduous but valuable practice of idea generation) and using it too little (and losing out on the valuable practice of revision). Idea generation is not the only use of AI language models; they can also gamify learning.

Students can use AI to give feedback on their writing. In my personal experience, I have asked ChatGPT to rate my (non-homework) essays on a scale from 1 to 10 on their effectiveness to deliver a specific message or to persuade. Its results are helpful! Not only does it give concrete scores, but it also gives some tips (not exact giveaways) on improving them. In many cases, I wanted to tinker with my essays and make small changes just to see how the scores changed. I felt like I was playing a video game, which is fun in its own right. This mindset may convince more students to write! Using AI like this calls for questions on academic honesty.

Academic dishonesty regarding using AI is tricky. According to The Register, people are still divided on whether using AI-generated content is plagiarism (Quach). Scholarly journals have already seen ChatGPT as a co-author, which many disapprove of (Stokel-Walker). Moreover, there is currently no consistent way to determine if an AI or a human wrote a block of text (Quach). Stephen Monroe, chair and assistant professor of writing and rhetoric, calls for the obvious regulation of AI in the writing process (Quach). Regardless of the novelty of AI, it is a tool just like Grammarly, the keyboard, the typewriter, autocorrect, and so on. We regulate these tools in many ways during homework assignments, so we need to do the same with AI. However, regulation almost always lags behind new technologies; the purgatory will be a new test on teachers and students alike.

In conclusion, AI can be both harmful and helpful to the writing process. Whether using it to spur brainstorming or gauge one's writing, there is a balance between using AI too much or too little. Use it too little, and you may fall behind the competition or miss out on learning opportunities. Use it too much, and you may find your credibility gone. AI is here to stay not only in the domain of writing but also in the broader category of education, so we all need to adapt to it.
